Notes for Samuel Evins McCord:

John T. and Samuel Evins McCord, brothers, lived in Lafayette County, MS. John T. McCord was born 1830 in South Carolina. Samuel E. McCord was born in Mississippi and moved to Cass County, TX with some of children and grandchildren around 1910. Located in southeastern Lafayette County, Paris was reportedly first settled in 1836. One of its earliest settlers was Dr. William Lemuel Paris, who built the first home there, according to Hometown Mississippi by Jim Brieger. Dr. Paris also operated a drug store in the area, and within 20 years of his arrival, the town grew to include a post office, a Masonic lodge, and two churches. "One of the earliest and best schools in the country" was located in the Primitive Baptist Church here in the mid-1800s and was run by an Englishman named Winterton. Later, in 1889, the Paris Normal School was established with a goal of preparing students to attend the university. Whether the town was named for Dr. Paris is a matter of some dispute. Another theory is that early settlers came from Paris, Tennessee, and named the Mississippi town in its honor, according to Joan Bratton, a descendant of some early residents. Joan's husband Theron also spent his early childhood in Paris and said he remembers the town as an active community with three stores selling groceries, clothing, and other general wares. He attended the Paris School, which was located near the current intersection of Highways 9 West and 315. Indeed, Paris did thrive at one time. After being officially incorporated in 1873, the town boasted general stores, a blacksmith, and a horse-powered grist mill and cotton gin, according to the Lafayette County Heritage Book. In 1905, a steam-operated cotton gin was built here, and in 1939, the Oxford Eagle proclaimed that many of the town's residents were now enjoying electricity.

105. Amanda Lucinda Taylor, daughter of Taylor, was born in 1825 in MS. She died in Jan 1867 in Dalton, Cass Co, TX.

Notes for Joseph Sanford Jenkins:

Family stories indicates the ancestors of Joseph Sanford Jenkins moved to the United States from Wales, United Kingdom. Jenkins families in that area were numerous. Jenkins is one of many forms of names indicating Johnson. It is derived from two ancient names meaning Little John. The name is identified with pioneer settlements of Maine and New Hampshire. While no family connections with Jenkins of this area have yet been established, an old dictionary belonging to William S. Jenkins, son of Joseph Sanford Jenkins, has been identified with a book store in Hinsdale, New Hampshire. Family tradition holds that the Jenkins were from Wales, and that they originally were named McJenkins or MacJenkins. A number of MacJenkins families were living in South Carolina during the early 1800s. A T. C. McJenkins and wife, ages 35 and 33 respectively, along with one male child, is listed in the 1890 Census Roll of the Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory, OK. This is thought to be a nephew of Joseph Sanford.

Prior to 1860, Joseph Sanford moved his family into Texas on a flatboat - landing at Jefferson's Landing, Jefferson, Marion County, Texas. Joseph freighted supplies for a time from Jefferson's Landing to Atlanta in Northeast Cass County, possibly before moving to the Dalton area. Apparently Joseph's family remained in the Dalton area during the Civil War. Family tradition indicates that Joseph served as a spy for the Confederate Forces during the Civil War. No information has been discovered to date indicating when, where and with what units he might have served.

Family tradition holds that although Joseph Sanford was only 19 when he married Lucinda, he was said to have married and fathered 2 daughters in MS before marrying Lucinda. A trip away from Cass County, Texas probably occurred about early 1870, just prior to the 1870 Cass County, Texas US Census, and soon after the death of Joseph Sanford's second wife, Lucinda Taylor. The trip was to MS, where daughters of Joseph Sanford by his first marriage are believed to have lived at that time.

Joseph Sanford and the family were traveling across Arkansas by wagon. Times were hard the family had to stop for awhile to earn money to buy supplies for the rest of the trip. The store owner, noticing Joseph

Asa had no shoes, offered to keep and raise him as his own son, promising to see he got a good education. Joseph Sanford refused, however, and they eventually completed their trip back to Cass County, Texas.

Joseph Sanford is believed to have moved to Marlow, Chickasaw Nation Indian Territory (now Stephens County), Oklahoma about 1890. Joseph said he loaded all of his possessions into two covered wagons for the move. This is most likely when the Red River crossing photographs was taken. It took him sixteen days to make the trip from Dalton, Texas, to Healdton, Indian Territory. Two of Joseph's brother-in-laws are believed to have been living in Healdton at that time. One is believed to have been Joseph Benjamin Christian and his wife Catherine Smith, sister of Hester Ann. The other is believed to have been Nelson Winter and his wife Margaret Catherine Jenkins, Joseph's sister.

Joseph's family apparently remained in Healdton only for a short time. He said that he was not satisfied to make his home there, so he soon moved his family on to Marlow, where he leased land and settled. According to Joseph, Marlow was first named Marlow Grove. It was here where the Marlow brothers, desperados from Texas, settled and built a large corral. The Chisholm cattle trail just happened to pass this way. When a cattle herd passed on the way to Kansas City, the Marlow brothers would try to have the drovers pen their cattle for a charge. If the cattlemen didn't, the Marlow brothers would stampede the herd at night. Then later on they would gather the strays and take them to Fort Sill where they were sold for the Indians.

Joseph passed away while living there on May 26, 1893, and was buried in the Marlow cemetery.

Notes for John Harty:

When John Harty came to Texas, he rode his horse all the way from Kentucky to Clarksville, Texas. John Harty immigrated to Texas with his father, Dennis Harty. Dennis Harty received the Mexican land grant of a league and a labor and John received a land grant adjoining his father's for 1/3 league or 1473 acres since John was a single man. These land grants are located just west of the Bowie County line in Red River County. He worked for two years as an overseer near Clarksville. Authorities came after John to enlist in the Mexican War. Not wanting to go, he chose an old, broken down horse which could not keep up with the others. A bad storm came up, they rode off and left him, so he returned home.

John had a wife and three children while in Red River County. Due to a terrible tragedy- a snake bit two of the children and while the mother was checking on them the baby fell in a wash tub and drowned- all in one day. The mother became despondent and soon died. John left Red River County, riding his horse to Cass County, to the village of Cusseta and built a two story log house. He traded that to Haney Floyd for 1400 acres of land that reached from John Russell's place to Dave Finley's place.

For the Civil War he paid a man name Jacobs $15.00 a month and a horse and a saddle to go to war in his place. John was a saddler and made saddles for the Confederacy during the Civil War. He also made shoes and built coffins for people. After the death of his first family, John Harty rode off and left the land in Red River County. He settled in Cusseta in Cass County and built a two story log house which he later traded to Nelson H Haney and Killis S Floyd for 1400 acres of land. The land in Red River County was sold to Rebecca Titus in 1844.

John Harty's second wife was Julianna Haney, 1825-1876, from Tennessee, the daughter of "Major" Nelson H and Mary E Haney. Their seven children were born in Cusseta near Marietta in Cass County, Texas. Uncle Horace said he was the 1st jurors that met under a tree, after coming to Cass County.

John Harty married Julia Ann Haney. Their children were: Jane, Paralee, Augustus Rufus, Rebecca, Jennie, Dorothea, and Julie.

John married 2nd Martha Elizabeth Finley. They had: Ellen Cornelia, and John Henry.

Robert Hicks, born 1583 in Southwark, London, England, arrived at Plymouth Colony on the "Fortune", which was the first ship to arrive after the "Mayflower", on November 11, 1621. Robert was from Bermondsey Street in Southwark, New London, England. Robert was one of the fifty-eight original Purchasers of Plymouth Colony. He was a fellmonger and a leather dresser while living in England. He was a man of education and active in the affairs of the colony until his death 24 March 1647. Robert married Margaret (Winslow) Hicks, who arrived in Plymouth Colony two years later (1623) on the Anne, with their three children, son Samuel, age 11, and daughters Lydia and Phoebe. A fourth child, Ephraim, was born in Plymouth in 1624. Robert Hicks died at Plymouth, MA 24 March 1647. There is little or no information on the relationship of James Nell to Robert Hicks, but the naming conventions of the descendants of James Nell would indicate a relationship.

Notes for Louisa Taylor:

Louisa was a sister of Joseph Sanford's first wife Lucinda Amanda Taylor. Both were born in MS, and their mother was reportedly born in Ireland. I cannot find details to corroborate this. But according to other family traditions, Louisa and her first husband, Joseph Benjamin Franklin (Frank) Christian lived on a farm neighbouring the farm of Joseph Sanford Jenkins in Cass County, Texas. Louisa married Jenkins, but the two continued to maintain their separate neighboring farms in Cass County, Texas, until the combined family moved about 1890 to Indian Territory, finally settling in Marlow, Chickasaw Nation (later Stephens County, Oklahoma).

Notes for Joseph Sanford Jenkins:

Family stories indicate the ancestors of Joseph Sanford Jenkins moved to the United States from Wales, United Kingdom. Jenkins families in that area were numerous. Jenkins is one of many forms of names indicating Johnson. It is derived from two ancient names meaning Little John. The name is identified with pioneer settlements of Maine and New Hampshire. While no family connections with Jenkins of this area have yet been established, an old dictionary belonging to William S. Jenkins, son of Joseph Sanford Jenkins, has been identified with a book store in Hinsdale, New Hampshire. Family tradition holds that the Jenkins were from Wales, and that they originally were named McJenkins or MacJenkins. A number of MacJenkins families were living in South Carolina during the early 1800s. A T. C. McJenkins and wife, ages 35 and 33 respectively, along with one male child, is listed in the 1890 Census Roll of the Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory, OK. This is thought to be a nephew of Joseph Sanford.

Prior to 1860, Joseph Sanford moved his family into Texas on a flatboat - landing at Jefferson's Landing, Jefferson, Marion County, Texas. Joseph freighted supplies for a time from Jefferson's Landing to Atlanta in Northeast Cass County, possibly before moving to the Dalton area. Apparently Joseph's family remained in the Dalton area during the Civil War. Family tradition indicates that Joseph served as a spy for the Confederate Forces during the Civil War. No information has been discovered to date indicating when, where and with what units he might have served.

Family tradition holds that although Joseph Sanford was only 19 when he married Lucinda, he was said to have married and fathered 2 daughters in MS before marrying Lucinda. A trip away from Cass County, Texas probably occurred about early 1870, just prior to the 1870 Cass County, Texas US Census, and soon after the death of Joseph Sanford's second wife, Lucinda Taylor. The trip was to MS, where daughters of Joseph Sanford by his first marriage are believed to have lived at that time.

Joseph Sanford and the family were traveling across Arkansas by wagon. Times were hard the family had to stop for awhile to earn money to buy supplies for the rest of the trip. The store owner, noticing Joseph Asa had no shoes, offered to keep and raise him as his own son, promising to see he got a good education. Joseph Sanford refused, however, and they eventually completed their trip back to Cass County, Texas.

Joseph Sanford is believed to have moved to Marlow, Chickasaw Nation Indian Territory (now Stephens County), Oklahoma about 1890. Joseph said he loaded all of his possessions into two covered wagons for the move. This is most likely when the Red River crossing photographs was taken. It took him sixteen days to make the trip from Dalton, Texas, to Healdton, Indian Territory. Two of Joseph's brother-in-laws are believed to have been living in Healdton at that time. One is believed to have been Joseph Benjamin Christian and his wife Catherine Smith, sister of Hester Ann. The other is believed to have been Nelson Winter and his wife Margaret Catherine Jenkins, Joseph's sister.

Joseph's family apparently remained in Healdton only for a short time. He said that he was not satisfied to make his home there, so he soon moved his family on to Marlow, where he leased land and settled. According to Joseph, Marlow was first named Marlow Grove. It was here where the Marlow brothers, desperados from Texas, settled and built a large corral. The Chisholm cattle trail just happened to pass this way. When a cattle herd passed on the way to Kansas City, the Marlow brothers would try to have the drovers pen their cattle for a charge. If the cattlemen didn't, the Marlow brothers would stampede the herd at night. Then later on they would gather the strays and take them to Fort Sill where they were sold for the Indians.

Joseph passed away while living there on May 26, 1893, and was buried in the Marlow cemetery.

Notes for John Womack:

John Womack, son of William who settled in the 1760's or 1770's in Chatham County, North Carolina (Chatham County formed 1771 from Orange County). Chatham County court minutes for 1778 listed John Womack on a road jury. John Womack married around 1770(?) to Elenor Rorie, daughter of John Rorie of Halifax Co., No Co (The will of John Rorie, Sr., Halifax Co, NC, Will Book 3, page 31, named, among others, son-in-law John Womack, and four grandchildren, heirs of daughter Elenor Womack: James, Aner, Martha,, and Rorie Womack, Will dated 7 July 1782, probated Aug 1782,) After the death of his first wife, Elenor Rorie, John Womack took a common law wife, Susannah Allen. John Womack and family lived in that section of Chatham County which fell into Lee County, No C., in 1907, in the easternmost point of Lee County, near the Chatham County line and the Harnett County line, and about six miles northeast of the town of Broadway in Lee County. John Womack also owned land across the county line in Moore County (Moore County deeds destroyed up to 1889), but in that section of Moore County which fell into Lee County in 1907. John lived in Caswell Co, NC during the Revolutionary War. He received final war settlement in 1790, member of NC General Assembly, member legislature from Caswell Co, in 1787, House of Common form Person Co, in 1792. Elected to the Senate in 1800. All the land in North Carolina once belonged to the State (to the Crown in colonial days), but most of it has been granted the past three hundred years, a few acres at a time, to those settlers who applied for it and paid the required fee of a few cents per acre. There is a total of nearly a quarter of a million land grants on record in the Land Grant Office, Raleigh, North Carolina, ranging in size from a fraction of an acre to several thousand acres, but averaging between 100 and 150 acres per grant. Of the 32 million acres in North Carolina, 28 million acres were privately owned in 1950, and 4 million acres were public lands. The tillable and habitable acreage-the 28 million acres--was all taken up generations ago. A search through the files at the Land Grant Office revealed that between 1760 and 1910 three dozen grants were issued to various members of the Womack family. Notes for George Barber:

Oglethorpe County, in northeast Georgia, is the state's seventeenth county and comprises 441 square miles. Creek and Cherokee Indians lived there when the first white people arrived, but they lost their land through treaties signed in 1773. Fur trappers and traders traversed the area before the first non-Indians established permanent settlements. A few trappers established a temporary community known as Kennedy's Gate, but it was no longer extant by the time of the American Revolution (1775-83). At first the area was all part of Wilkes County, but Oglethorpe County, named for Georgia's founder James Oglethorpe, was carved from Wilkes in 1793 to accommodate population growth. Over the years Oglethorpe County has gained land from surrounding counties, sometimes in exchange for parts of itself. The first permanent white settlers, led by Revolutionary War veteran Colonel George Mathews to Georgia after the war, were a group of wealthy tobacco planters from Virginia. Residents later moved into cotton production with the invention of the cotton gin and the construction of railroads, which greatly assisted marketing efforts. After the plantation system lost its profitability in the aftermath of boll weevils, fire, war, and emancipation, the county's agriculture shifted to small farms, often operated on the sharecropping system. Grain, poultry, beef, and dairy cattle were among the county's major farm products. Farm income was augmented by employment in the lumber, granite, and textile industries.

919. Mourning Thomson.

Notes for Richard Pryor:

Richard Pryor is the earliest known ancestor of the Pryor families of the Jackson Purchase. He is first found in Albemarle County, Virginia where he is recorded as serving in the Albemarle militia guarding the western Virginia frontier during the French and Indian War in 1758.

The birth of a child, Richard, was recorded on the 11th of Dec 1763 in the Douglas Register of St. James Northam Parish, Goochland County to Richard Pryor and Mary Mooney. Mary obviously died shortly after the birth of the child for Richard and Mourning Thomson married circa 1765, probably in Louisa County, Virginia. Mourning is named as "Mourning Pryor" in the 1774 Louisa County will of her father, Thomas Thomson.

In 1780 Richard Pryor is reportedly on a list filed showing names of those building a road to Kentucky through the Cumberland Gap during the Revolution. He was recorded as serving on juries in Washington County, North Carolina in 1779 and again in 1782. Greene County, Tennessee was established out of Washington County by the North Carolina general assembly on 18 April 1783 and in 1783 Richard Pryor is listed in an Assessor's Return of the 4th District of Greene County. Richard is also recorded as an overseer of a road from Camp to Cove Creek that year.

On December 6th, 1787, Mourning "Prier" was one of the charter members of the Big Pigeon Primitive Baptist Church in Greene/Cocke Counties, Tennessee. In February of 1794, the church minutes record Mourning "Prier" as making application for dismissal which was presumably in preparation for the family's move to the Logan County, Kentucky area.

Richard Pryor was taxed for 200 acres on the Red River in Logan County in 1796, but was deceased before August 8, 1797 when Mourning was appointed administratrix of his estate. (Logan County Court Order Bk. A-1, p. 67)

The only document recording his heirs is an 1811 Logan County deed wherein ten heirs sold their portion of a tract of 250 acres in Logan County to Jonathan. The deed specifically states that the sellers are the heirs of Richard "Prior. It was common practice for legatees to sell their portions of an estate to one sibling but the problem with this deed is that it does not make an assertion that Jonathan was also an heir of Richard Prior.

On the 19th of June 1800, Mourning Pryor married Thomas White in Logan County, Kentucky and the following Smith County, Tennessee deed confirms that she was in fact the widow of Richard Pryor:

10 May 1802 - Smith Co., TN Deed Book 1801-17 p. 94

Between Thomas White and Mourning White, formerly Prior (Pryor) admx. of Richard Pryor, decd of Logan Co., KY and James Ewing of Smith Co., TN...During the lifetime of said Richard Pryor, he bound himself in the penal sum of 200 pounds to execute a deed to William Pryor for 400 acres of land, his choice of 1280 acres part of 3000 acres lying on the Caneyford of Cumberland River, Mourning White (formerly Pryor) widow of Richard obtained letters of Administration of said decedent and said William Pryor has sold to James Ewing his rights to 200 of the 400 acres of land etc.

Five years after Mourning married Thomas White, on September 28, 1805, Jonathan Pryor married his youngest daughter Elizabeth. When Thomas died in 1806, he named Mourning as the executrix of his estate in his will dated 18 Mar 1805. She is recorded, as Mourning White, in Logan County tax records after Thomas' death and in the 1810 census. Presumably she died sometime before 1820 for she is not found in that census. Trips to Logan County to search extensively for more information have failed to produce any further record of Mourning or a gravesite.

3665. Elizabeth Vernon, daughter of Thomas Vernon, was born in 1671 in Cheshire, England. She died in 1732 in East Nottingham, Chester, PA.

Notes for Andrew Jobe Jr.:

Tavern Keeper, Surveyor, Carpenter, Sheriff, Member of Assembly Born aboard ship between Kent, England and Portsmouth, New England (probably Rhode Island as Portsmouth, NH was not yet in existence) December 1682, The ship, "Welcome", arrived first in New Castle then Upland. It carried William Penn and a considerable number of Quakers. It can be assumed that Andrew Jobe and his brothers were there to greet them. In January Upland was renamed Chester in honor of the many settlers from Cheshire. 1683; Lord Baltimore claimed the most navigable part of the Delaware River for Maryland. William Penn asked his personal friend, Andrew Jobe, to help arbitrate, and, with much pomp ceremony, they met with Baltimore in May of 1683 in New Castle. Penn claimed his charter from Charles II gave him the right to the lower counties, but Baltimore claimed his charter from Charles I, which predated Penn's by 30 years, stated, "into that part of Delaware Bay on the north, which lies under the 40th degree of northern latitude." Finally Penn and his party prevailed, and a writer of the time Penned, "William Penn and Andrew Jobe being educated men, and being of such unusual persuasive and executive ability, convinced all concerned of the correctness of the boundary line." 1685; Thomas Vernon was named as peace maker. He and Andrew Jobe, Jr. agreed to the bad effects of selling whiskey to the Indians. They Subscribed to the building of a Meeting House in Chester and collected subscriptions for Friends who were suffering in other parts of the colonies. They also subscribed to the 1st printing press in Penn.

1697-1701; Andrew Jobe was sheriff of Chester County and Clerk of the Chester Monthly Meeting 1699 Fall; William Penn arrived for the second time to find that Lord Baltimore in Maryland was still claiming a large tract of land in southern Pennsylvania. "William Penn, with his intimate friend Andrew Jobe, a man of education and influence, took a united stand in favor of the subject. Many Quaker leaders, who had been Penn's companions in England, sympathized with Penn and Job. Loaded with provisions and equipment, they proceeded on horseback to the disputed territory. Other than Penn and Jobe there was William Brown, James Brown, Ebenezer Empson, Cornelius Empson, Joel Baily, James Cooper, John Richardson, Edward Beeson, John Churchman, and Henry Reynold They found a beautifully rolling country that was moderately watered with small streams. They knew the soil was fertile for there was a dense growth of hickory, oak, and chestnut. Penn selected a spot for the Meeting House. The peace-loving Quakers decided upon a way to thwart Baltimore; they, themselves, would settle and survey the tract, which was named Nottingham." 1710; Andrew Jobe established the Blue Ball Tavern, a brick house at the junction of the Lancaster/ New Castle and Philadelphia/ Baltimore roads, on Lot #35 of the Nottingham Lots. The inn served travelers for more than 100 years. Although now a private dwelling, it still stands. A historical marker stands opposite. "As Andrew Jobe was well-educated and a personal friend and companion of William Penn, it would seem that he had returned to England for his education. There were no universities in the colonies except for Harvard, and it would have been impossible that a Quaker could attend Puritan Harvard during the seventeenth century. It must be noted that Andrew did not marry until the age of forty-two and that all of his children, except the last, had Biblical names. He was sixty years of age when Patience was born; it would seem that her name was a double joke. The will of ANDREW JOBE, JR. specified his wife as executrix. It provided land for the adult sons, the money with which to build houses, and pay for the keep of the workmen. He also provided for his minor children, and left money to his son-in-law and his four grandchildren. His signature was affixed to the will."

Notes for Elizabeth Vernon:

August 1682, The ship, "Friendship", with Robert Crossman, master, arrived from Liverpool; aboard was Thoms Vernon, wife, children (Elizabeth, future wife of Andrew Job would have been one of these children), brothers, and other extended family members. (After their arrival, Thomas was very prominent in the Quaker faith. His home was often used as a meeting place.. He served as a Juror in the 1st Chester County Court. His lands in Nether Providence on the west side of Providence Road, adjoined his brother's tracts. The area is now known as Rose Valley) Andrew Jobe and Elizabeth Vernon were married at the Chester Monthly Meeting. (Quakers married each other by the consent of and in the presence of Friends. They married after their own fashion, but without consent of the government, which considered the marriages illegal.)

Notes for James Duncan MacKorda:

JAMES MCCORD, BORN 1620, TRADITIONAL SCOTTISH CLAN CHIEFTAIN HAD SEVERAL GRANDSONS WHO CAME BY WAY OF NORTHERN IRELAND TO AMERICA IN 1720-38. THEY SETTLED IN THE LOWER HUDSON RIVER VALLEY OF NEW YORK, NEAR CHARLOTTESVILLE, VIRGINIA, IN BOTH LANCASTER AND YORK COUNTIES, PENNSYLVANIA, AND AT CHARLESTON, SOUTH CAROLINA. THEY LEFT A GREAT HERITAGE, ONE OF REVERENCE FOR GOD, LOYALTY TO COUNTRY, AND LOVE OF FAMILY. THEY AND MANY OF THEIR DESCENDANTS MADE GREAT SACRIFICES THAT WE MIGHT ENJOY FREEDOM AND LIBERTY. TODAY, THEIR DESCENDANTS AROUND THE WORLD HONOR THAT HERITAGE. One of the largest family groups in the American Revolution, over 100 McCords served in most of its major battles. Some 11 McCords were at Valley Forge with General George Washington in the bitter winter of 1777-78. Earlier, McCords were in the French and Indian War where some were killed or taken captive by the French and Indians at Ft. McCord, near Chambersburg, Pennsylvania on April 1, 1756, and held for 1-6 years. Some were recovered in a daring rescue 5 months later by Colonel John Armstrong, Commander of the Frontier Pennsylvania Rangers at Kittanning, near present-day Pittsburgh. Those recovered included Mary McCord. Jean McCord Lowry and her 3 children who were recovered later. For the rescue at Kittanning, Colonel John Armstrong and his Frontier Ranger officers received medals struck in their honor by John Penn of the William Penn Family. Ft. McCord was the most famous private fort in America in the French and Indian War. Most of the McCords in the American Revolution appear related to a common ancestor in Scotland, Clan Chieftain James MacKorda, who, by strong tradition was born 1620 on the Isle of Skye, Scotland and was killed at the famous Battle of Killiecrankie Pass, Scotland in July 1689. Various other McCords came from other parts of Scotland in the 1600'-1800's. After the Battle of Killiecrankie Pass, John McCord, son of the Clan Chieftain, took the remaining members of the McCord family to Ulster, Northern Ireland where they lived until 1720-1740 when many of them moved to America. Several of Clan Chieftain James MacKorda's grandsons who came to America in 1720-1738 settled in Pennsylvania, Virginia, New York and South Carolina. They were William, David, James and John McCord who went to Lancaster County, Pennsylvania; Andrew and Johannes McCord who went to Augusta and Albemarle County, Virginia; John and James McCord who went to the lower Hudson River Valley in New York; and Barnard McCord who went to Charleston, South Carolina. Each of these appear related to the son of Clan Chieftain James MacKorda, John McCord (born 1660), who was married to Mary MacDougall. During the American Revolution, the 100 McCords knew or served with many of the most famous Americans in the Revolution and some in the Continental Congress. By 1790 McCord families pioneering the American frontier were living in 13 states including Maine, New Hampshire, New York, NJ Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee and Kentucky. By 1820, there were over 400 McCord families in these states and in Illinois and Indiana, Michigan and Ohio, Arkansas and Alabama, and other areas of the Great West. Most of these McCords appear descended from the original McCord settlers in America of 1720-38. Many of the descendants of these original settlers and those who served in the American Revolution have not yet been traced.

Notes for William Wallace:

In 1616-1618, William Wallace stands first in the list of masons at Edinburgh Castle and was paid for making moulds for plasteres and carving window-boards in additions to a cartouche over a doorway that is noted as an accomplished specimen of Netherlands strapwork dated 1615 and stamped with Wallace's mark. It is not assumed that William Wallace was necessarily the chief agent in the change in style which is seen in so many Scottish buildings after 1615, but he is certainly the representative figure, and the style issues from the official quarter where he was the senior artificer. The reconstruction of Linlithgow Palace (dated 1619 and 1620) is also credited to William Wallace. Although, Wallace's most famous and significant building was begun eight years later. Heriot's Hospital at Edinburgh was founded under the will of George Heriot for the education of fatherless boys. He began it in 1628, but died before its completion in 1631. William Wallace died in 1631, but his style long survived him. Already in his lifetime it was caricatured at Caerlaverock (1620) and well imitated in 1628 at Moray House, Edinburgh, the town-house of a Countess of Home.

Notes for William Womack:

Formed originally as Henrico Shire, and shortly thereafter termed a "county," Henrico County was named for Henricus founded in 1611 by Sir Thomas Dale, a settlement wiped out during the Indian Massacre of 1622. Cape Henry at the southern mouth of the Chesapeake Bay, Henricus, Henrico Cittie, and later Henrico County, were all named for Henry Frederick, Prince of Wales, the eldest son of James I of England. Prince Henry showed great promise, and his death from typhoid fever at the age of eighteen was regarded as a tragedy for England. On, November 18, 1618, the Virginia Company of London, proprietor of the colony, gave instructions on the formation of a laudable government for the Colony to Sir George Yeardley when he departed from London to become full governor of Virginia. As directed, in 1619, Governor Yearly established four large corporations, termed cities [sic], which were designated to encompass the developed portion of the colony. These were Kecoughtan (later renamed Elizabeth Cittie), James Cittie, Charles Cittie, and Henrico Cittie. In 1634, the King of England ordered the colony, which numbered about 5,000 settlers, to be divided into eight shires, or counties. One of these original shires (of which six are still considered extant) was Henrico County. Henrico County originally extended to both the north and south sides of the James River (named in 1607 for King James I). Henrico's first boundaries incorporated an area from which 10 Virginia counties were later formed in whole or in part, as well as the independent cities of Richmond, Charlottesville, and Colonial Heights. The original site of Henricus was located by archeologists late in the 20th century. On the south side of the James River (across from the original site of Varina, it is now in Chesterfield County, which developed Henricus Historical Park there.

7297. Geertje Lambertse Mol, daughter of Lambert Huybertsen Mol and Tryntje Pieterse Kouwenhoven, was born on 06 Sep 1648 in New York City, NY. She died in NY.

Notes for Hans Jacobszen Hartje:

Hans Jacobsen Hartje, a weaver, was born in Berne, Switzerland, probably while his parents were traveling from Holland to America. Hans Jacobsen is Dutch for John, son of Jacob. Jacob often means James. Thus Hans was the son of Jacob Hartje and his mother was probably Frene, since his second natural daughter was Frene. He immigrated to New Amsterdam, known as New York today, around 1663. The Ship Passenger Lists-New York and New Jersey (1600-1825) edited by Carl Boyer, quotes, "'Deutsche Einzeleinwanderer und Familien in Neu-Niederland,' Jahr-buch Fur Auslandsdeutsche Sippenkunde, I (1936), 45-53 Lancour No. 73." which indicates that Harty, Hans Jakobsen, Weber aus Bern in der Schweiz, or Hans Jacobsen Hartje was a weaver (Weber) and that he was born in Bern in Switzerland or (Schweiz). He came to America on board De Bonte Koe (The Spotted Cow) on April 16, 1663. His name was listed on the manifest as Hans Jacob Hartje. Hartje sounds like (Harding), hence the name Harding was used by some early descendants. He bought a small farm in Stuyvesant's Bowery on 12 Feb 1669. Most of his children were born there and baptized in the local Dutch Reformed Church. He was married on 29 Jul 1668 in Bushwick, Kings, New York to Geertje, Gertrude (in English), Lambertse Mol. Geertje was the daughter of Lambert Huybertsen Mol and his wife Tryntje Pieterse Kouwenhoven. It should be noted that her mother's middle name, Pieterse, indicated that her father was Pieter or Peter Kouwenhoven. Geertje was christened on 6 Sep 1648 in the Bowery, New Amsterdam, Kings, New York. The "se" on the end of Peter indicated that she was the daughter of Peter. Her brother's middle names would have been "Pietersen" or son of Pieter which means Peter in English. (Many Dutch families named the first female baby after the mother's mother and the first male baby after the father's father. The second son was named after the mother's father and the second daughter was named after the father's mother. This, when linked with the practice of using the father's first name as a middle name for each child born to that father, made it possible to identify the lineage of families.)

Notes for Anthony Crocker:

During the 17th century, shortly after establishment of the settlement at Jamestown in 1607, English settlers and explored and began settling the areas adjacent to Hampton Roads. Captain John Smith in 1608 crossed the James River and obtained fourteen bushels of corn from a tribe of Native Americans called Warrosquyoackes. In the next few years, several plantations were established along the shore in the area south of the river. By 1634, the Virginia Colony consisted of eight shires or counties with a total population of approximately 5,000 inhabitants. One of these was Warrosquyoake Shire, renamed Isle of Wight County in 1637, after the island in the English channel of the same name. The name was probably changed due to the difficulty of spelling and pronouncing its Native American name and because the Isle of Wight had been the home of some of the principal colonists. National Historic Landmark, St. Luke's Church, built in 1632, the nation's only original Gothic church and the oldest existing church of English foundation in America is located in the county. In 1732 a considerable portion of the northwestern part of the original shire was added to Brunswick County; and in 1748 the entire county of Southampton was carved out of it. Mary Wombwell and Anthony Crocker had the following child:

Notes for Lawrence Womack:

The crest of Laurence Womack is a cross-crosslet and the arms are argent with a lion rampant gules. Basically it is a shield divided centrally from top to bottom. The left half has a black background with a gold cross touching each edge. Inside the gold cross are 5 black/blue stars positioned in each bar of the cross and one right in the centre. The right hand side of the crest is white in background with a red lion standing sideways (facing the centre) up on its hind legs. I have a photo of this crest on the pillar in St. Margarets Westminster.

WOMACK of Mettingham, Horringer, Boxted. Laurence W., Archdeacon of Suffolk, Bishop of St. Davids

"In the 1930's a Jesuit priest called father Ralph Baines did much research into the Spinkhill Mission i.e. The hidden centre of Catholic activity since the religious persecutions of 1600's. At the end of Father Baine's book, having dealt with all the priests and gentry, he makes the point that none of it would have flourished without the ordinary simple catholic people of the district. He then selects the family Womack - - Much has been written in these pages of recusancy, of penal laws, in a word - of persecution. It is refreshing to see the other side of the picture and record the sterling loyalty and patriotism of those whose names are recorded in the registers. We could not do better than to sketch the story of the family of Womac. They lived in Barlbrough and Spinkhill certainly from the time of the reformation, the name is unusual. The name of Womac as pronounced by its owners - who were illiterate, takes curious forms, and finally ends up surprisingly aspirated as "Hummock". But what indeed was there in a name when sterling character was the mark of the breed? We can trace four heads of the Barlbrough family - granssire, son, grandson, and great grandson - respectively Ignatius, Francis I, FrancisII, FrancisIII b.1795. Ignatius was a man of gigantic stature, and a large mound marking his tomb used to be shown in "Squire Bowdon's Field". All the Womacs seem to have been of powerful build. It has even been suggested that the reason why spinkhill was never beaten up was that pursuivant or mobs coming from the South, would have to pass by Barlbrough, which would mean negotiating the Womacs!

They were originally a Norman Family who had known better days. they had owned property in Nottingham and Durham. The latter branch suffered heavily for the faith, but clung loyally to it as did our Barlbrough family."

English history around the 1600's was full of religious persecution which was why the Pilgrim Fathers set sail for America. I find it odd that one branch of the Womacks was so Catholic in spite of persecution and the other (Norfolk) branch was obviously happy to "go with the flow" and be Protestant hierarchy. Obviously prior to Henry VIII's dissolution of the monasteries all the Womack's would have been Catholic. Perhaps the main family Womack settled in Norfolk after Essex and then the Womack's not willing to renounce Catholicism after Henry's excommunication had to move Northwards to avoid persecution whilst those Womacks willing to bend to Henry's will stayed in Norfolk and were rewarded with office - just a thought. Incidentally the Womacks today are Methodists (as are most Yorkshire folk).

- iii. Jane Womack was born in 1615 in VA.

12290. Timothy Allen, son of George Aleyne Allen and Katherine Watts, was born in 1594 in Wragby, Lincolnshire, England. He died on 03 Aug 1634 in Picardie, France. He married Abigail Worsham in 1615 in Wragby, Lincolnshire, England.

12293. Kelly was born in 1606 in VA. She died in Prince George Co, VA.

Notes for "Jno" Jonathan Aekin:

Varina (Va-ry-nah), VA is a former unincorporated town and current magisterial district in the easternmost portion of Henrico County, Virginia, United States. Varina was named for Varina Farms, a plantation established by John Rolfe on the James River about 45 miles upstream from the first settlement at Jamestown in the Virginia Colony, and across the river from Sir Thomas Dale's 1611 settlement at Henricus. Varina became the county seat of Henrico when it was formed as one of the eight original shires of Virginia in 1634, and remained in that capacity until 1752, when a new courthouse was built at Richmond. In 1612, English colonist John Rolfe introduced the cultivation of a special strain of tobacco for export to England, which was much better-liked by the Europeans than a harsher form which grew naturally in Virginia. As his tobacco became a cash crop for the struggling colony's economy, he established a plantation estate at Varina Farms about 45 miles upstream from the first settlement at Jamestown and across the river from Sir Thomas Dale's 1611 settlement at the progressive community at Henricus. Henricus was developed as a potential replacement for the shortcomings of the Jamestown location. Varina Farms Plantation was named for a mild variety of the tobacco from Spain which was similar to the non-native strain Rolfe used in developing his successful product. The plantation became the home of Rolfe and his second wife, Pocahontas, the daughter of Chief Powhatan, head of the Native American Powhatan Confederacy for two years following their marriage in 1614. It was the birthplace of their son, Thomas Rolfe in 1615. The area which included Varina Farms Plantation was part of Henrico Cittie (sic), an incorporation formed in 1619 by the Virginia Company of London. Henricus was clearly the central development of Henrico Cittie. However, although Henricus was wiped out and not rebuilt after the Indian Massacre of 1622, a tiny village grew up on Rolfe's Plantation which was called both "Varina" and "Henrico Parish". When the original eight shires of Virginia (later renamed counties) were formed in 1634, Varina became the county seat of Henrico. Varina was established as an unincorporated town in 1680. It featured a courthouse, a church for Henrico Parish, and commercial buildings, such as a tavern. The Henrico Glebe house at Varina was the location where Reverend Dr. James Blair is believed to have drawn up the plans for new school which became the College of William and Mary in 1693 after his mission to England at the request of the House of Burgesses. The royal charter for the new school resurrected one of the dreams of the colonists which had been lost at Henricus in 1622.

Notes for William Wallace:

In 1616-1618, William Wallace stands first in the list of masons at Edinburgh Castle and was paid for making moulds for plasterers and carving window-boards in additions to a cartouche over a doorway that is noted as an accomplished specimen of Netherlands strapwork dated 1615 and stamped with Wallace's mark. It is not assumed that William Wallace was necessarily the chief agent in the change in style which is seen in so many Scottish buildings after 1615, but he is certainly the representative figure, and the style issues from the official quarter where he was the senior artificer. The reconstruction of Linlithgow Palace (dated 1619 and 1620) is also credited to William Wallace. Although, Wallace's most famous and significant building was begun eight years later. Heriot's Hospital at Edinburgh was founded under the will of George Heriot for the education of fatherless boys. He began it in 1628, but died before its completion in 1631. William Wallace died in 1631, but his style long survived him. Already in his lifetime it was caricatured at Caerlaverock (1620) and well imitated in 1628 at Moray House, Edinburgh, the town-house of a Countess of Home.

14592. Conradt Jacobsen Hartje was born in 1610 in Netherlands. He married Frene.

14593. Frene was born in 1612 in Netherlands.

Notes for Conradt Jacobsen Hartje:

In the early 1600's, the people of the Netherlands claimed the land along the Hudson River as New Netherlands. Henry Hudson was commissioned to seek out an all water route to the Indies. His exploration, in 1609, took him up a wide, deep beautiful river, which he named the Hudson. The people of the Netherlands were called "Dutch" by most other cultures. The Dutch bought land from the local indians, which they promptly renamed New Amsterdam. Careful comparison of Amsterdam to New Amsterdam would divulge many similarities, even the manner in which houses and windmills were located on the area surrounding the harbors. Eventually, the English decided to invade and take over the operation of the New Netherlands colony. This was completed in 1664. A timeline would reveal that New Netherlands existed from the early 1600's until 1664. A short time, but much was accomplished by the Dutch in this time period. The first schools of the new world were created in New Amsterdam. Separation of church and state, as a concept, surfaced because of the tolerant nature of the Dutch. Religious persecution did not exist in the Netherlands and was not permitted to exist in New Netherlands either. The people of New Netherlands were like their parents in the Netherlands, in that they had a decent, Christian, moral system which assisted immigrants by creating order, developing good work and private ethics, while creating fun, family activities which brought balance to the entire community. Some historians even suggest that the colors of the flag of the Netherlands, which was red-orange, white and blue served as a model for the red, white and blue that Americans grew to love. "Old Glory" may have used the colors of the Dutch flag, or maybe the colors of the Washington coat of arms were used to create it. In the final evaluation, only our ancestors know why they picked the colors and arrangement of our flag and nation, but one could assume that even they were not always aware why certain practices were started while others were not. The history of this family is documented in Rikers' History of Harlem on page 362, Bergens' Early Settlers of King County, Long Island, New York on page 209 and in Ancestors of William Adams Collard and Rebecca Severs, his wife, The Harty-Hartje Family by Pauline Harty Welch and The Harty Family, a prepublication history by Lyle Johnston. Baptisms from 1638-1730 Reformed Dutch Church of New York and New York Genealogical and Biographical Society Volume II. The family is also listed in Scandinavian Immigrants to New York 1630-1674 Page 413, and in the Abridged Genealogy of Marion Carroll Harty and his wife Matilda Elizabeth Meador written by Mary Pauline Harty Welch.

Notes for William Wallace:

Wallace of Elderslie (1) The name 'Wallace' (probably derived from Galleius, with many variations such as Walleis) is believed to imply that this family originated in either Wales or (perhaps more likely) the Cymbric (Cimbric) kingdom of Strathclyde which at one time covered much of the middle-western half of Great Britain. It is thought likely that the family was one of the many that made a mark in Scotland in King David's 'administrative revolution' in the second quarter of the 12th century. However, it is not clear how long the family had been in Scotland by that time - it may have come to Scotland shortly before or even during King David's reign (1124-1153). (2) Much interest has been focused on this family because of its most famous son, Sir William Wallace, who was Guardian of Scotland during a key part of 'The Wars of Independence'. However, rather than help clarify the genealogy of the family, that interest has managed to obscure it because so many contradictory descents have been produced. To date no 'definitive' pedigree has yet been found.

Janet Hamilton and William Wallace had the following children:

- 8484. i. William Wallace was born in 1555 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. He died on 06 Apr 1611 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. - iii. John Wallace was born in 1570 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. He died in Dec 1651 in Renfrew, Renfrewshire, Scotland.

16970. Hugh Crawford, son of Lawrence Crawford and Helen Campbell, was born in 1521 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland. He died in 1576 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland. He married Margaret Colquhoun in 1550 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland.

16971. Margaret Colquhoun was born in 1530 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland. She died in 1561 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland.

Notes for Hugh Crawford:

Kilbirnie (Gaelic Cille Bhraonaigh) is a small town situated in North Ayrshire on the west coast of Scotland. Kilbirnie derived its name from the parish church and the church obtained its name from the saint to whom it was dedicated; the Celtic Cil, pronounced Kil, signifying a church, being prefixed to the name of the saint; St Birnie, or Birinus, is said to have been a bishop and confessor who converted the West Saxons. In the early years of Mary Queen of Scots's reign, foreign invasions were a constant threat. The English wanted more than soothing diplomacy from the Queen Mother - Mary of Guise - they wanted custody of little Mary herself, in order to marry her to their child-king Edward VI. The result was another in the series of invasions known to later history as 'the Rough Wooing' and the catastrophic Scots defeat at the battle of Pinkiecleuch, on 10 September 1547. William Patten, a Londoner (as he proudly styles himself on the title page of his work), came to Scotland with the invasion force and saw for himself the dreadful carnage left in the wake of the successful English assault. To the Scottish Catholic church, the English invaders were heretics, and a good turn-out of church men and their vassals was a feature of the Scottish side. Alas, the Kirk militant had little success. The battle was a disaster, with casualties greater than at Flodden. Mary had to be spirited to safety at the island priory of Inchmahome whilst arrangements were made to evacuate her to France. Soon after this notable strewing of their footmen's weapons, began a pitiful sight of the dead corpses lying dispersed abroad, some their legs off, some but houghed, and left lying half-dead, some thrust quite through the body, others the arms cut off, diverse their necks half a sunder, many their heads cloven, of sundry the brains pasht out, some others again their heads quite off, with other many kinds of killing. After that and further in chase, all for the most part killed either in the head or in the neck, for our horsemen could not well reach the lower with their swords. And thus with blood and slaughter of the enemy, this chase was continued five miles in length westward from the place of their standing, which was in the fallow fields of Inveresk until Edinburgh Park and well nigh to the gates of the town itself and unto Leith, and in breadth nigh 4 miles, from the Firth sands up toward Dalkeith southward. In all which space, the dead bodies lay as thick as a man may note cattle grazing in a full replenished pasture. The river ran all red with blood, so that in the same chase were counted, as well by some of our men that somewhat diligently did mark it as by some of them taken prisoners, that very much did lament it, to have been slain above 14 thousand. In all this compass of ground what with weapons, arms, hands, legs, heads, blood and dead bodies, their flight might have been easily tracked to every of their three refuges. And for the smallness of our number and shortness of the time (which was scant five hours, from one to well nigh six) the mortality was so great, as it was thought, the like aforetime not to have been seen. Indeed it was the better maintained with their own swords that lay each where scattered by the way, whereof our men, as they had broke one still took up another; there was store enough, and they laid it on freely, that right many among them at this business broke three or four ere they returned homeward to the army. I may well perchance confess, that herein we used some sharpness (although not as much as we might) and little courtesy, and yet I can safely avow, all done by us, as rather by sundry respects driven and compelled, then either of cruelty or delight in slaughter. And like someway to the diligent master that sharply sometime (when warning will not serve) doth beat his scholar, not hardly for hate of child, or his own delight in beating, but for love he would have him amend his faults or negligence and beats him once surely because he would need to beat him no more. One cause of the correction we used, I may well count to be their tyrannous vow they made (which we certainly heard of) that whensoever they fought and overcame, they would slay so many, and spare so few, a sure proof of whereof they plainly had showed at our onset before, where they killed all, and saved not a man. Another respect was to revenge their great and cruel tyranny shown at Panyarhough [the battle of Ancrum Moor, 1545 - a Scottish victory] where they slew the Lord Evers [Sir Ralph Eure] and cruelly killed as many else of our men as came in their hands . . . Another thing and not the meanest matter was that their armour amongst them so little differed, and their apparel so base and beggarly, wherein the Lurdein [rascal] was in a manner all one with the Lord, and the loun [commoner] with the laird: all clad alike in jacks covered with white leather, doublets of the same or of fustian and most commonly all white hose. Not one with either chain, brooch, ring or garment of silk that I could see, unless chains of latten drawn four or five times along the thighs of their hose and doublet sleeves for cutting; and of that sort I saw many. This vileness of port [appearance], was the cause that so many of their great men and gentlemen were killed and so few saved. The outward show, the semblance and sign whereby a stranger might discern a villein from a gentleman was not among them to be seen. As for words and goodly proffer of great ransoms, [they] were as common and rife in the mouths of the one as of the other. And therefore hereby it came to pass that after, at the examination and counting of the prisoners we found taken about above twenty of their villeins to one of their gentlemen: whom no man need to doubt, we had rather have spared, then the villeins, if we could have known any difference between them in taking. And yet notwithstanding all these our just causes and quarrels to kill them, we showed more grace and took more to mercy then the case on our side, for the cause aforesaid did well deserve or require . . . for the prisoners accounted by the Marshal's book were numbered to above 1500. Touching the slaughter, sure we killed nothing so many as (if we had minded cruelty so much) for the time and opportunity right well we might, for my Lord's grace, of his wonted mercy, much moved with the pity of this sight, and rather glad of victory, than desirous of cruelty, soon after (by guess) five of the clock stayed his standard of his horsemen at the furthest part of their camp westward and caused the trumpets to blow a retreat. Whereat Sir Ralph Sadler treasurer (whose great diligence at the time and ready forwardness in the chiefest of the fray before did worthily merit no small commendation) caused all the footmen to stay and then with much travail and great pain, made them to be brought into some order again. It was a thing yet not easily to be done, by reason they all as then somewhat busily applied their market to the spoil of the Scottish camp, wherein were found good provision of white bread, ale, oatcakes, oatmeal, mutton, butter in pots, cheese and in diverse tents good wine also; good store to say truth, of good victual for the manner of the country. And in some tents among them (as I heard say) were also found of silver plate a dish or two, 2 or 3 goblets and 3 or 4 chalices, the which the finders (I know not with what reverence but with some devotion hardly) plucked out of the cold clouts and thrust into their warm bosoms... It was a wonder to see, but that (as they say) many hands make light work, how soon the dead bodies were stripped out of their garments stark naked, even from as far as the chase went until the place of our onset; whereby the personages of our enemies might by the way easily be viewed and considered; the which for tallness of stature, cleanness of skin, bigness of bone with due proportion of all parts, I for my part advisedly noted to be such, as but that I saw that it was so, I would not have believed sure so many of that sort to have been in all their country. Among them lay there many priests and kirkmen, as they call them, of whom it was bruited amongst us, that there was a whole band of 3 or 4 thousand, but we were after informed, it was not altogether so... Among these [the Scots] weapons and beside several other banners, standards and pennons, a banner of white sarcenet was found under which it was said these kirkmen came, whereupon was painted a woman with her hair about her shoulders, kneeling before a crucifix, and on her right hand a church; after that written a long upon a banner in great roman letters afflictæ sponsæ ne obliviscaris [Do not forget your afflicted spouse]; which words declared that they would have this woman to signify the church, Christ's spouse and thus in humble wise making her petition unto Christ her husband that he would not now forget her, his spouse, being scourged and persecuted, meaning at this time by us. It was said it was the Abbot of Dunfermline's banner; but whether it was his or the Bishop of Dunkeld's, the governor's brothers [brothers of the Regent Arran] (who I understand were both in the field) and what the number of kirkmen was, I could not certainly learn: but I was sure it was some devout papist's device, that not only be like would not endeavor to do ought for atonement and peacemaking between us, but all contrariwise brought forth his standard stoutly to fight in field himself against us; pretexting this his great ungodliness thus bent toward the maintenance of a naughty quarrel with colour of religion to come in aid of Christ's church. Which church to say truth, coming thus to battle full appointed with weapon and guarded with such sort of deacons to fight; however in painting he had set her out, a man might well think in that in condition he had rather framed a cursed quean [hussy] that would pluck her husband by the pate except she had her will, than like a meek spouse that went about humbly by submission and prayer to desire her husband's help for redress of things amiss. Notes for Prudence:

Early in Henry VII's reign, the Royal pretender, Perkin Warbeck, besieged Exeter in 1497. The King himself came down to judge the prisoners and to thank the citizens for their loyal resistance. Great disturbances throughout the county followed the introduction of Edward VI's Book of Common Prayer. The day after Whit Sunday 1549, a priest at Sampford Courtenay was persuaded to read the old mass. This insubordination spread swiftly into serious revolt. The Cornish quickly joined the men of Devon in the Prayer Book Rebellion and Exeter suffered a distressing siege until relieved by Lord Russell. Devon is particularly known for its Elizabethan mariners, such as Sir Francis Drake, Gilbert, Sir Richard Grenville and Sir Walter Raleigh. Plymouth Hoe is famous as the location where Drake continued to play bowls after hearing that the Spanish Armada had been sighted. Plymouth was the departure point for the Mayflower in 1620. During the Civil War, Devon largely favoured the Parliamentary cause, but there was a great desire for peace in the region and, in 1643 a treaty for the cessation of hostilities in Devon and Cornwall was agreed. Only small-scale skirmishes continued until the capture of Dartmouth and Exeter in 1646 by Sir Thomas Fairfax. He then captured Tiverton and defeated Lord Hopeton's army at Torrington. The last place held for the king was Charles Fort at Salcombe. After the Monmouth Rebellion in 1685, Judge Jefferies held one of his 'bloody assizes' at Exeter. In 1688, the Prince of Orange first landed in England at Brixham (where his statue stands in the town harbour) to launch the Glorious Revolution and his journey to London to claim the English throne as William III. He was entertained for several days at both Forde and at Exeter.

Notes for Thomas Oliver:

Thomas Oliver, son of John Oliver (2), was born in Bristol, in 1582, baptized there at St. Stephen's Church, April* 14. 1582. He was the immigrant. He came to New England in the ship "William and Frances" from London in 1632, bringing his wife Ann and children, arriving June 9. He was admitted a freeman in 1632; was selectman. He was one of the founders of the First Church of Boston (now of Chauncey Place) and became ruling elder, a man of great influence and usefulness in Boston. His wife Ann died May, 1635, and he married second, about 1637, Anne Purchase, widow of Oliver Purchase, Sr. His daughter-in-law, Sarah

Purchase, was admitted to the church May 31, 1646; his wife November 27, 1642. She died December 20, 1662. He died June 1, 1658, and his death is thus recorded in Hull's Diary: "Mr. Thomas Oliver, one of the ruling elders of the church died being ninety years old (he was probably about eighty. If the date of baptism is correct it seems that he was not much over seventy-five. The date of children's births indicates that he was not ninety years old. Hull has the date of death wrong also). He was a man of his outward profession, a chirurgeon (doctor). He kept his house, or went very little abroad for the space of three years before he died, and was a lively pattern of old age spoken of in Eccles. xii; though in his former years a man very serviceable." (Those who think he was from Lewes in Sussex, England, born 1568, accept his age at death as ninety to support this theory). His will dated March 13, 1652, was proved January 27, 1657; mentions John, Peter, James, Samuel, Abigail, daughters Woodfall and Havens; Richard Woodfall at Muddy River; Hannah Tarne; grandchildren in old as well as New England. Children: 1. John, admitted to church in 1632; born according to one account in 1616, probably about 1610. 2. Peter, admitted to church June 23, 1639, born about 1617. 3. Samuel, admitted to church May 21, 1643, born about 1619. 4. Abigail, admitted to church July 30, 1643, married James Johnson. 5. James, born 1620, admitted to church June 13, 1640. 6. Nathaniel, died November, 1633, aged fifteen. 7. Daniel, died June, 1637

Notes for William Wallace:

Wallace of Elderslie (1) The name 'Wallace' (probably derived from Galleius, with many variations such as Walleis) is believed to imply that this family originated in either Wales or (perhaps more likely) the Cymbric (Cimbric) kingdom of Strathclyde which at one time covered much of the middle-western half of Great Britain. It is thought likely that the family was one of the many that made a mark in Scotland in King David's 'administrative revolution' in the second quarter of the 12th century. However, it is not clear how long the family had been in Scotland by that time - it may have come to Scotland shortly before or even during King David's reign (1124-1153). (2) Much interest has been focused on this family because of its most famous son, Sir William Wallace, who was Guardian of Scotland during a key part of 'The Wars of Independence'. However, rather than help clarify the genealogy of the family, that interest has managed to obscure it because so many contradictory descents have been produced. To date no 'definitive' pedigree has yet been found.

Janet Hamilton and William Wallace had the following children:

8484. i. William Wallace was born in 1555 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. He died on 06 Apr 1611 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. 51787. Margaret Colquhoun was born in 1530 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland. She died in 1561 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland.

Notes for Hugh Crawford:

Kilbirnie (Gaelic Cille Bhraonaidh) is a small town situated in North Ayrshire on the west coast of Scotland. Kilbirnie derived its name from the parish church and the church obtained its name from the saint to whom it was dedicated; the celtic Cil, pronounced Kil, signifying a church, being prefixed to the name of the saint; St Birinie, or Birinus, is said to have been a bishop and confessor who converted the West Saxons. In the early years of Mary Queen of Scot's reign, foreign invasions were a constant threat. The English wanted more than soothing diplomacy from the Queen Mother - Mary of Guise - they wanted custody of little Mary herself, in order to marry her to their child-king Edward VI. The result was another in the series of invasions known to later history as 'the Rough Wooing' and the catastrophic Scots defeat at the battle of Pinkiecleuch, on 10 September 1547. William Patten, a Londoner (as he proudly styles himself on the title page of his work), came to Scotland with the invasion force and saw for himself the dreadful carnage left in the wake of the successful English assault. To the Scottish Catholic church, the English invaders were heretics, and a good turn-out of church men and their vassals was a feature of the Scottish side. Alas, the Kirk militant had little success. The battle was a disaster, with casualties greater than at Flodden. Mary had to be spirited to safety at the island priory of Inchmahome whilst arrangements were made to evacuate her to France. Soon after this notable strewing of their footmen's weapons, began a pitiful sight of the dead corpses lying dispersed abroad, some their legs off, some but houghed, and left lying half-dead, some thrust quite through the body, others the arms cut off, diverse their necks half a sunder, many their heads cloven, of sundry the brains pasht out, some others again their heads quite off, with other many kinds of killing. After that and further in chase, all for the most part killed either in the head or in the neck, for our horsemen could not well reach the lower with their swords. And thus with blood and slaughter of the enemy, this chase was continued five miles in length westward from the place of their standing, which was in the fallow fields of Inveresk until Edinburgh Park and well nigh to the gates of the town itself and unto Leith, and in breadth nigh 4 miles, from the Firth sands up toward Dalkeith southward. In all which space, the dead bodies lay as thick as a man may note cattle grazing in a full replenished pasture. The river ran all red with blood, so that in the same chase were counted, as well by some of our men that somewhat diligently did mark it as by some of them taken prisoners, that very much did lament it, to have been slain above 14 thousand. In all this compass of ground what with weapons, arms, hands, legs, heads, blood and dead bodies, their flight might have been easily tracked to every of their three refuges. And for the smallness of our number and shortness of the time (which was scant five hours, from one to well nigh six) the mortality was so great, as it was thought, the like aforetime not to have been seen. Indeed it was the better maintained with their own swords that lay each where scattered by the way, whereof our men, as they had broke one still took up another; there was store enough, and they laid it on freely, that right many among them at this business broke three or four ere they returned homeward to the army. I may well perchance confess, that herein we used some sharpness (although not as much as we might) and little courtesy, and yet I can safely avow, all done by us, as rather by sundry respects driven and compelled, then either of cruelty or delight in slaughter. And like someway to the diligent master that sharply sometime (when warning will not serve) doth beat his scholar, not hardly for hate of child, or his own delight in beating, but for love he would have him amend his faults or negligence and beats him once surely because he would need to beat him no more. One cause of the correction we used, I may well count to be their tyrannous vow they made (which we certainly heard of) that whensoever they fought and overcame, they would slay so many, and spare so few, a sure proof of whereof they plainly had showed at our onset before, where they killed all, and saved not a man. Another respect was to revenge their great and cruel tyranny shown at Panyarhough [the battle of Ancrum Moor, 1545 - a Scottish victory] where they slew the Lord Evers [Sir Ralph Eure] and cruelly killed as many else of our men as came in their hands . . . Another thing and not the meanest matter was that their armour amongst them so little differed, and their apparel so base and beggarly, wherein the Lurdein [rascal] was in a manner all one with the Lord, and the loun [commoner] with the laird: all clad alike in jacks covered with white leather, doublets of the same or of fustian and most commonly all white hose. Not one with either chain, brooch, ring or garment of silk that I could see, unless chains of latten drawn four or five times along the thighs of their hose and doublet sleeves for cutting; and of that sort I saw many. This vileness of port [appearance], was the cause that so many of their great men and gentlemen were killed and so few saved. The outward show, the semblance and sign whereby a stranger might discern a villein from a gentleman was not among them to be seen. As for words and goodly proffer of great ransoms, [they] were as common and rife in the mouths of the one as of the other. And therefore hereby it came to pass that after, at the examination and counting of the prisoners we found taken about above twenty of their villeins to one of their gentlemen: whom no man need to doubt, we had rather have spared, then the villeins, if we could have known any difference between them in taking. And yet notwithstanding all these our just causes and quarrels to kill them, we showed more grace and took more to mercy then the case on our side, for the cause aforesaid did well deserve or require . . . for the prisoners accounted by the Marshal's book were numbered to above 1500. Touching the slaughter, sure we killed nothing so many as (if we had minded cruelty so much) for the time and opportunity right well we might, for my Lord's grace, of his wonted mercy, much moved with the pity of this sight, and rather glad of victory, than desirous of cruelty, soon after (by guess) five of the clock stayed his standard of his horsemen at the furthest part of their camp westward and caused the trumpets to blow a retreat. Whereat Sir Ralph Sadler treasurer (whose great diligence at the time and ready forwardness in the chiefest of the fray before did worthily merit no small commendation) caused all the footmen to stay and then with much travail and great pain, made them to be brought into some order again. It was a thing yet not easily to be done, by reason they all as then somewhat busily applied their market to the spoil of the Scottish camp, wherein were found good provision of white bread, ale, oatcakes, oatmeal, mutton, butter in pots, cheese and in diverse tents good wine also; good store to say truth, of good victual for the manner of the country. And in some tents among them (as I heard say) were also found of silver plate a dish or two, 2 or 3 goblets and 3 or 4 chalices, the which the finders (I know not with what reverence but with some devotion hardly) plucked out of the cold clouts and thrust into their warm bosoms... It was a wonder to see, but that (as they say) many hands make light work, how soon the dead bodies were stripped out of their garments stark naked, even from as far as the chase went until the place of our onset; whereby the personages of our enemies might by the way easily be viewed and considered; the which for tallness of stature, cleanness of skin, bigness of bone with due proportion of all parts, I for my part advisedly noted to be such, as but that I saw that it was so, I would not have believed sure so many of that sort to have been in all their country. Among them lay there many priests and kirkmen, as they call them, of whom it was bruited amongst us, that there was a whole band of 3 or 4 thousand, but we were after informed, it was not altogether so... Among these [the Scots] weapons and beside several other banners, standards and pennons, a banner of white sarcenet was found under which it was said these kirkmen came, whereupon was painted a woman with her hair about her shoulders, kneeling before a crucifix, and on her right hand a church; after that written a long upon a banner in great roman letters afflictæ sponsæ ne obliviscaris [Do not forget your afflicted spouse]; which words declared that they would have this woman to signify the church, Christ's spouse and thus in humble wise making her petition unto Christ her husband that he would not now forget her, his spouse, being scourged and persecuted, meaning at this time by us. It was said it was the Abbot of Dunfermline's banner; but whether it was his or the Bishop of Dunkeld's, the governor's brothers [brothers of the Regent Arran] (who I understand were both in the field) and what the number of kirkmen was, I could not certainly learn: but I was sure it was some devout papist's device, that not only be like would not endeavor to do ought for atonement and peacemaking between us, but all contrariwise brought forth his standard stoutly to fight in field himself against us; pretexting this his great ungodliness thus bent toward the maintenance of a naughty quarrel with colour of religion to come in aid of Christ's church. Which church to say truth, coming thus to battle full appointed with weapon and guarded with such sort of deacons to fight; however in painting he had set her out, a man might well think in that in condition he had rather framed a cursed quean [hussy] that would pluck her husband by the pate except she had her will, than like a meek spouse that went about humbly by submission and prayer to desire her husband's help for redress of things amiss. "The Campbells they are a' in arms,

Their loyal faith and truth to show,

With banners rattling in the wind,

--from "The Campbells Are Coming" a traditional pipe tune

This ancient Scottish name has its origins in a Gaelic nickname "Caimbeul", meaning "wry (or crooked) mouth", from "dam", bent or crooked, and "beul", mouth. That it was originally a nickname can be seen by a charter of 1447, which records Duncan le Cambeli, the first Lord Campbell, the "le" being the Scottish "lie", meaning "so called", or "known as". A sizeable group of early European surnames were gradually created from the habitual use of nicknames. These were given in the first instance with reference to occupation, or to a variety of characteristics, such as physical attributes or peculiarities, mental and moral characteristics, supposed resemblance to an animal's or bird's appearance or disposition, or to habits of dress. Clan tradition has it, that the Campbells were originally known as "Clana Duibhne" or "O'Duine", from one Diarmid O'Duine of Lochow. About 1390, Duncan Campbell witnessed a charter by Duncan, Earl of Levenax, and is believed to be the first namebearer to introduce a "p" into the name, influenced by the erroneous theory that "Cam(p)bell" comes from the Norman-French "de Campobello" i.e., "of the beautiful plain". Campbell is the family name of the hereditary Dukes of Argyll, dating from 1445, and their Coat of Arms is described thus: "Quarterly, first and fourth, gyronny of eight gold and black, the Crest being a boar's head couped gold". The first recorded spelling of the family name is shown to be that of Gillespic Cambel, which was dated 1263, in the "Exchequer Rolls of Scotland", during the reign of King Alexander 111 of Scotland, 1249 - 1286. Surnames became necessary when governments introduced personal taxation. In England this was known as Poll Tax. Throughout the centuries, surnames in every country have continued to "develop" often leading to astonishing variants of the original spelling.

Colin Campbell, 6th Laird of Glenorchy and son of Sir George Campbell, was called Grey Colin for the color of his hair and beard. He expanded the power of his branch of Clan Campbell eastward through the Glens of Breadalbane and up against the land's of the Stewart Earls of Atholl in Perthshire. What better way to consolidate and secure his eastern borders than to arrange the marriage of his son 'Black' Duncan Campbell with Janet Stewart, daughter of the 4th Earl of Atholl?

In 16th Century Scotland, an earl was roughly two or three ranks above a laird and much more politically powerful because earls sat in Parliament. The marriage of Duncan and Janet was a smart move for the Breadalbane Campbells and shows their growing strength.

Colin's alliances and connections in all directions increased the Breadalbane Campbells' wealth and influence. Since he did not like to travel, Grey Colin sent his son Black Duncan as emissary to Edinburgh where Duncan became good friends with James VI, the first Protestant king of Scotland.

During the 6th Laird's lifetime, in the mid to late 1500's, many Clan Campbell members joined the Reformation and converted to Protestantism. The clan chief, Lord Archibald Campbell, 4th Earl of Argyll, became a Presbyterian before he died in 1558. His son, the 5th Earl of Argyll and Colin's superior kinsman, was a devout Protestant who played an important role in the events involving Mary Queen of Scots. Colin's father-in-law William, Lord Ruthven, was an early Protestant supporter before he died in 1552.

Along with the majority of Scots, especially the Lowlanders and the townspeople, Colin and his other subordinate clansmen became followers of John Knox, the founder of Presbyterianism. Some clans (Erskines, Camerons, Oliphants) who had close contacts with the English joined the Church of England.

A significant number of the old Highland clans were more conservative and stayed Roman Catholic for some time (MacDonalds, MacLeans, MacGregors, Gordons). This set the Campbells at odds with several neighboring clans. Many Campbells were killed supporting their new faith and defending their holdings against raiding Catholic clans. There were atrocities and bad feelings on both sides for the next two centuries. Catholic neighbors even accused some Campbells of witchcraft.

The Campbells generally supported the Protestant Stewart kings while Scottish Highlander Catholics supported the exiled Stuarts (Jacobites) who were based in France and encouraged by Rome. But there were times in the early 1700's when some Campbells joined the Jacobites after the English picked George I, a "wee German lairdie" (little German squire), to be the King of Great Britain.

Many Campbells did well under the British kings after England and Scotland were united. Several became members of the Scottish branch of the British nobility. The Earls of Argyll moved up to become Dukes, the top ranking nobility, while Colin's descendants eventually became the Earls and then Marquesses of Breadalbane.

For the past 400 years, the British Army has recruited heavily from Clan Campbell and its associated families. At least 16 different Campbell-based Highlander regiments have moved up into the line of battle with their bagpipers playing "The Campbells Are Coming."

Colin's alliances and connections in all directions increased the Breadalbane Campbells' wealth and influence. Since he did not like to travel, Grey Colin sent his son Black Duncan as emissary to Edinburgh where Duncan became good friends with James VI, the first Protestant king of Scotland.

During the 6th Laird's lifetime, in the mid to late 1500's, many Clan Campbell members joined the Reformation and converted to Protestantism. The clan chief, Lord Archibald Campbell, 4th Earl of Argyll, became a Presbyterian before he died in 1558. His son, the 5th Earl of Argyll and Colin's superior kinsman, was a devout Protestant who played an important role in the events involving Mary Queen of Scots. Colin's father-in-law William, Lord Ruthven, was an early Protestant supporter before he died in 1552.

Along with the majority of Scots, especially the Lowlanders and the townspeople, Colin and his other subordinate clansmen became followers of John Knox, the founder of Presbyterianism. Some clans (Erskines, Camerons, Oliphants) who had close contacts with the English joined the Church of England.

A significant number of the old Highland clans were more conservative and stayed Roman Catholic for some time (MacDonalds, MacLeans, MacGregors, Gordons). This set the Campbells at odds with several neighboring clans. Many Campbells were killed supporting their new faith and defending their holdings against raiding Catholic clans. There were atrocities and bad feelings on both sides for the next two centuries. Catholic neighbors even accused some Campbells of witchcraft.

The Campbells generally supported the Protestant Stewart kings while Scottish Highlander Catholics supported the exiled Stuarts (Jacobites) who were based in France and encouraged by Rome. But there were times in the early 1700's when some Campbells joined the Jacobites after the English picked George I, a "wee German lairdie" (little German squire), to be the King of Great Britain.

Many Campbells did well under the British kings after England and Scotland were united. Several became members of the Scottish branch of the British nobility. The Earls of Argyll moved up to become Dukes, the top ranking nobility, while Colin's descendants eventually became the Earls and then Marquesses of Breadalbane.

For the past 400 years, the British Army has recruited heavily from Clan Campbell and its associated families. At least 16 different Campbell-based Highlander regiments have moved up into the line of battle with their bagpipers playing "The Campbells Are Coming."

This ancient Scottish name has its origins in a Gaelic nickname "Caimbeul", meaning "wry (or crooked) mouth", from "dam", bent or crooked, and "beul", mouth. That it was originally a nickname can be seen by a charter of 1447, which records Duncan le Cambeli, the first Lord Campbell, the "le" being the Scottish "lie", meaning "so called", or "known as". A sizeable group of early European surnames were gradually created from the habitual use of nicknames. These were given in the first instance with reference to occupation, or to a variety of characteristics, such as physical attributes or peculiarities, mental and moral characteristics, supposed resemblance to an animal's or bird's appearance or disposition, or to habits of dress. Clan tradition has it, that the Campbells were originally known as "Clana Duibhne" or "O'Duine", from one Diarmid O'Duine of Lochow. About 1390, Duncan Campbell witnessed a charter by Duncan, Earl of Levenax, and is believed to be the first namebearer to introduce a "p" into the name, influenced by the erroneous theory that "Cam(p)bell" comes from the Norman-French "de Campobello" i.e., "of the beautiful plain". Campbell is the family name of the hereditary Dukes of Argyll, dating from 1445, and their Coat of Arms is described thus: "Quarterly, first and fourth, gyronny of eight gold and black, the Crest being a boar's head couped gold". The first recorded spelling of the family name is shown to be that of Gillespie Cambel, which was dated 1263, in the "Exchequer Rolls of Scotland", during the reign of King Alexander 111 of Scotland, 1249 - 1286. Surnames became necessary when governments introduced personal taxation. In England this was known as Poll Tax. Throughout the centuries, surnames in every country have continued to "develop" often leading to astonishing variants of the original spelling.

Colin Campbell, 6th Laird of Glenorchy and son of Sir George Campbell, was called Grey Colin for the color of his hair and beard. He expanded the power of his branch of Clan Campbell eastward through the Glens of Breadalbane and up against the land's of the Stewart Earls of Atholl in Perthshire. What better way to consolidate and secure his eastern borders than to arrange the marriage of his son 'Black' Duncan Campbell with Janet Stewart, daughter of the 4th Earl of Atholl?

In 16th Century Scotland, an earl was roughly two or three ranks above a laird and much more politically powerful because earls sat in Parliament. The marriage of Duncan and Janet was a smart move for the Breadalbane Campbells and shows their growing strength.

Colin's alliances and connections in all directions increased the Breadalbane Campbells' wealth and influence. Since he did not like to travel, Grey Colin sent his son Black Duncan as emissary to Edinburgh where Duncan became good friends with James VI, the first Protestant king of Scotland.

His son, the 5th Earl of Argyll and Colin's superior kinsman, was a devout Protestant who played an important role in the events involving Mary Queen of Scots. Colin's father-in-law William, Lord Ruthven, was an early Protestant supporter before he died in 1552.

Along with the majority of Scots, especially the Lowlanders and the townspeople, Colin and his other subordinate clansmen became followers of John Knox, the founder of Presbyterianism. Some clans (Erskines, Camerons, Oliphants) who had close contacts with the English joined the Church of England.

A significant number of the old Highland clans were more conservative and stayed Roman Catholic for some time (MacDonalds, MacLeans, MacGregors, Gordons). This set the Campbells at odds with several neighboring clans. Many Campbells were killed supporting their new faith and defending their holdings against raiding Catholic clans. There were atrocities and bad feelings on both sides for the next two centuries. Catholic neighbors even accused some Campbells of witchcraft.

The Campbells generally supported the Protestant Stewart kings while Scottish Highlander Catholics supported the exiled Stuarts (Jacobites) who were based in France and encouraged by Rome. But there were times in the early 1700's when some Campbells joined the Jacobites after the English picked George I, a "wee German lairdie" (little German squire), to be the King of Great Britain.

Many Campbells did well under the British kings after England and Scotland were united. Several became members of the Scottish branch of the British nobility. The Earls of Argyll moved up to become Dukes, the top ranking nobility, while Colin's descendants eventually became the Earls and then Marquesses of Breadalbane.

For the past 400 years, the British Army has recruited heavily from Clan Campbell and its associated families. At least 16 different Campbell-based Highlander regiments have moved up into the line of battle with their bagpipers playing "The Campbells Are Coming."

Notes for Sir Thomas Knyvett:

Sir Thomas Knyvett (also Knevitt or Knivet or Knevet), of Buckenham, Norfolk (died on 10 August 1512) was a young English nobleman who was a close associate of King Henry VIII shortly after that monarch came to the throne. According to Hall's Chronicle[1], Knyvett was a frequent participant in the jousts and pageants of the new king's glittering court. When Henry declared war on France in 1512, Knyvett, along with Sir John Carew, was given command of the royal flagship, the Regent. With a number of court favourites commanding other vessels, a small fleet set sail for the coast of Brittany. On 10 August 1512 they engaged a slightly larger French fleet, and a violent melee ensued in Brest. Knyvett's ship grappled with the French command vessel, and was engaged in boarding her when the French powder magazine blew up (some say it was deliberately ignited). The two vessels burst into flame. Knyvett and Carew both perished, along with the French captain and more than 1,700 men, both French and English.

Knyvett was married before July 1506 as her second husband to Lady Muriel Howard (died in childbirth Lambeth, 14 December 1512, interred 8 January 1513), by whom he had two children. She was the widow of John Grey, 2nd Viscount Lisle and 4th Baron Lisle and the mother of Elizabeth Grey, 5th Baroness Lisle, who was once engaged to Charles Brandon, 1st Duke of Suffolk. Lady Muriel was the daughter of Thomas Howard, 2nd Duke of Norfolk (1443-1524) and Elizabeth Tilney, and through the Howard connection, Knyvett was related to many of the great figures of English history (his brother-in-law, for example, was Thomas Boleyn, father of Queen Anne, and grandfather of Queen Elizabeth I).

Margaret Darcy and Sir William Tyrell had the following children:

- i. Sir James Tyrell was born in 1445. He died on 06 May 1502.

Notes for Sir James Tyrell:

Sir James Tyrell, Sheriff of Glamorganshire, Master of the Horse to King Richard III, Constable of Cardiff Castle, Chamberlain of the Exchequer b. 1445, d. 6 May 1502 Tyrell, Sir James (c.1455-1502), royal councillor, was the eldest son of William Tyrell of Gipping, Suffolk [see Tyrell family (per. c.1304-c.1510)], and his wife, Margaret, daughter of Robert Darcy of Maldon in Essex. William was executed for his involvement with John de Vere, the earl of Oxford, in a conspiracy against Edward IV in February 1462, but he was not attainted, and the custody of his land and of his heir James was bought from Cecily Neville, dowager duchess of York, by William's widow and her feoffees for £50 in March 1463. In 1471 James fought for the Yorkists at Tewkesbury, where he was knighted by Edward IV. By the following winter he was in the service of Richard, duke of Gloucester. He became a ducal councillor and feoffee, and was used by Richard on sensitive business such as conducting the dowager countess of Warwick northwards in 1473. He served under the duke in the Scottish campaigns of 1480-82 and was made banneret by him. He was the duke's nominee as chamberlain of the exchequer, and in November 1482 was commissioned to act in Gloucester's office of constable of England.

Tyrell acquired interests in the south-west through his marriage in 1469 to Anne, the daughter of John Arundel of Lanherne, Cornwall, and his first wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas, Lord Morley. He was knight of the shire for Cornwall in 1478, and in June 1483 he was elected for the abortive parliament of Edward V. After Gloucester's accession Tyrell became a knight of the body, and his name was put forward as a candidate for the Garter, although he was not chosen. He was master of the king's horse and of the henchmen. He played a role in the suppression of the rebellion of Henry Stafford, the duke of Buckingham, and was one of those who escorted the captured duke to the king at Salisbury. He was rewarded with the stewardship of the duchy of Cornwall for life and with the land that he had been disputing with his wife's half-brother, the rebel Thomas Arundel. But Richard employed him primarily in Wales, a connection already established in Edward IV's reign, when Tyrell had been the duke's sheriff of Glamorgan and steward of Morgannwg. After Buckingham's execution, Tyrell was prominent among the royal servants who were given authority to seize and administer the duke's forfeited Welsh estates and to reassert authority over the crown lands in Wales.

In spite of Tyrell's importance in Wales, Richard made him lieutenant of Guînes on 22 January 1485, during the illness of John, Lord Mountjoy; the defection to Tudor of Mountjoy's brother James Blount in the previous autumn had compromised royal control of the Calais fortresses. Tyrell was specifically charged to fulfil the post in person, and to leave south Wales to his subordinates-an order that shows the limited circle of people upon whom Richard was now prepared to rely. Tyrell was accordingly out of England when Richard was defeated at Bosworth and was able to transfer his services to Henry VII, who kept him in office at Guînes. But he lost the importance he had enjoyed under Richard III, as well as his other gains from that king, including the disputed Arundel lands. He was evidently still not fully in the king's favour in 1486. A regrant in February of two of his Welsh offices proved only temporary, and in June and July Tyrell thought it worth securing two royal pardons, one for himself and the other for himself and the Guînes garrison. But in December he was an ambassador to Maximilian, king of the Romans, and by 1488 he had again become a knight of the body. In February 1488 the king promised him compensation for his lost Welsh offices, valued by Tyrell at £3000 over three years. He was involved in the negotiations leading to the treaty of Étaples in 1492, and in 1495 he was one of the feoffees to the use of Henry VII's will.

Tyrell's downfall began obliquely. In 1499 Edmund de la Pole, earl of Suffolk, fled to Flanders and spent time with Tyrell at Guînes on the way-an episode later to be cited as the first of Tyrell's 'divers offences' against the king. Suffolk was persuaded to return to England, but fled again in the summer of 1501, and sought the help of Maximilian in making himself king. In the following spring Thomas Lovell was sent to Guînes to arrest Tyrell and a group of associates, including his son Thomas. James Tyrell was convicted of treason at the London Guildhall on 2 May and executed on 6 May. He was buried in the London church of the Austin friars, where his father was also buried. Tyrell was attainted on 25 January 1504, and the attainder was reversed on 19 April 1507.

It is as the murderer of the 'princes in the Tower'-the sons of Edward IV-that Tyrell is now usually remembered. The identification rests on a confession that Tyrell was said to have made between his condemnation and execution. No copy of the confession survives, but according to the version circulating among subsequent writers, Richard commanded the constable of the Tower, Sir Robert Brackenbury, to have the princes killed, and when Brackenbury hesitated Tyrell was sent to do the job instead-'sorrowfully', according to Polydore Vergil. The best-known version of the story is Thomas More's elaborately circumstantial account which is, however, demonstrably inaccurate in detail, notably in the lowly status assigned to Tyrell before the murder. Whatever its validity, the dissemination of Tyrell's 'confession' finally disposed of claims that the princes were still alive. If Tyrell's closeness to Richard III made him a plausible murderer, he was also (from the Tudor point of view) a very convenient one.

786445. ii. Eleanor Tyrrell was born in 1466 in Gipping, Suffolk, England. She died in 1514 in London, Middlesex, England. She married Sir Edmund Knyvett in 1481 in Wymondham, Norfolk, England. 1572895. Margaret Chedworth was born in 1424 in Buckinghamshire, England. She died on 03 Dec 1494 in Stoke By Nayland, Suffolk, England.

Notes for Sir John 1st Duke of Norfolk 'Earl Marshal' Howard Kg:

John Howard, 1st Duke of Norfolk, KG, Earl Marshal (1421- 22 August 1485) was an English nobleman, soldier, and the first Howard Duke of Norfolk. He was a close friend and loyal supporter of King Richard III of England[1] with whom he died in combat at the Battle of Bosworth.

Career

John Howard was the son of Sir Robert Howard (1385-1436) and the former Lady Margaret de Mowbray (1388-1459), eldest daughter of Thomas de Mowbray, 1st Duke of Norfolk (of the first creation) (1366-1399) and Lady Elizabeth FitzAlan (1366-1425). His paternal grandparents were Sir John Howard of Wighenham, Norfolk and Alice Tendring. He was known as "Jack (or "Jock", hence "Jockey") of Norfolk", and he was described as being a "man of average height, with a strong, square face".[2] The Howards were staunch adherents of the House of York during the Wars of the Roses, and John Howard, backed by his powerful Mowbray relations, upheld the Yorkist cause in Norfolk. After demonstrating his military prowess on the field during the Battle of Towton, he won the admiration of Edward IV of England who made him Constable of Norwich Castle, Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, and Treasurer of the Royal Household. He was summoned to Parliament as Lord Howard on 15 October 1470.[3] He was appointed Lord High Steward and walked in front of King Richard III of England, carrying the crown at his coronation. His eldest son, Thomas, Earl of Surrey carried the sword of state.

For his support of King Richard III during the deposition of King Edward V in 1483, he was created The Duke of Norfolk, third creation, on 28 June 1483.[3] The first creation of the Dukedom of Norfolk had become extinct on the death of the 4th Duke in 1476, and the second creation had been invalidated by the illegitimation of the 1st Duke of York (one of the Princes in the Tower, who was also 1st Duke of Norfolk) on 25 June 1483. Norfolk was also created Earl Marshal, and Lord Admiral of all England, Ireland, and Aquitaine.

Marriage

John Howard was married firstly in 1442 to Katherine Moleyns (1429 - 3 November 1465), the daughter of William de Moleyns and Anne Whalesborough of Cornwall by whom he had six children;[3] and then secondly sometime before 22 January 1467 to Margaret Chedworth (1436-1494), the daughter of Sir John Chedworth and Margaret Bowett by whom he had one daughter.[4] Margaret Bowett's parents were Nicholas Bowett of Rippingale, Lincolnshire, England and Elizabeth La Zouche of Harringworth, Northampton, England.

List of children

By his first wife, Katherine Moleyns he had the following six children:[3] Thomas Howard, 2nd Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Surrey (1443-21 May 1524), married firstly on 30 April 1472 as her second husband Elizabeth Tilney by whom he had nine children including Thomas Howard, 3rd Duke of Norfolk and Elizabeth Howard, wife of Sir Thomas Boleyn; he married secondly, in 1497, Agnes Tilney, by whom he had eight children. Anne Howard, married Sir Edmund Gorges of Wrexhall by whom she had issue. Isabel Howard, married Sir Robert Mortimer by whom she had issue. Joan Howard (died 1508), married in 1481 Sir John Timperley of Hintlesham, Suffolk. Margaret Howard, married Sir John Wyndham of Crownthorpe by whom she had issue.

Nicholas Howard.

By his second wife, Margaret Chedworth he had one daughter: Katherine Howard (died 17 March 1536), married John Bouchier, 2nd Baron Berners by whom she had issue.

Death

John Howard died at the Battle of Bosworth Field on 22 August 1485 along with his friend and patron King Richard.[5] Howard was the commander of the vanguard, and his son, the Earl of Surrey, his lieutenant. Howard was killed when a Lancastrian arrow struck him in the face after the face guard had been torn off his helmet during an earlier altercation with the Earl of Oxford.[6] He was slain prior to King Richard, which had a demoralising effect on the king. The night before, someone had left John Howard a note attached to his tent warning him that King Richard III, his "master," was going to be double-crossed (which he was): "Jack of Norfolk, be not too bold,

For Dickon, thy master, is bought and sold." [7] He was buried in Thetford Priory, but his body seems to have been moved at the Reformation, possibly to the tomb of the 3rd Duke of Norfolk at Framlingham Church. The monumental brass of his first wife Katherine Moleyns can, however, still be seen in Suffolk. Howard was the great-grandfather of Anne Boleyn and Catherine Howard, the second and fifth Queens consort, respectively, of King Henry VIII. Thus, through Anne Boleyn, he was the great-great-grandfather of Elizabeth I.

His titles were declared forfeit after his death by King Henry VII, but his son, the 1st Earl of Surrey, was later restored as 2nd Duke (the Barony of Howard, however, remains forfeit). His senior descendants, the Dukes of Norfolk, have been Earls Marshal and Premier Peers of England since the 17th century, and male-line descendants hold the Earldoms of Carlisle, Suffolk, Berkshire and Effingham.

1st Duke of Norfolk of the Howard family, son & heir of Sir Robert Howard by Margaret, dau of Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, & cousin & ultimately coheiress of John Mowbray, 4th duke of Norfolk (d. 1475). He entered the service of his kinsman John Mowbray, 3rd duke of Norfolk. He was of service to the Yorkist cause, for on the accession of Edward IV in 1461 he was knighted, appointed constable of Colchester Castle, sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, and one of the king's carvers, and was known to have 'great fellowship' with the king. In 1462 he was appointed constable of Norwich Castle, and received grants of several manors forfeited by the Earl of Wiltshire and others. He was joined in a commission with Lords Fauconberg and Clinton to keep the seas; and they made a descent on Brittany, and took Croquet and the Isle of Rhé. Towards the end of the year he served under Norfolk against the Lancastrians in the north, and was sent by the duke from Newcastle to help the Earl of Warwick at Warkworth, and in the spring of 1464 was with Norfolk in Wales when the duke was securing the country for the king. Howard returned home on 8 June (1464), and bought the reversion of the constablership of Bamborough Castle. On 3 Nov. 1465 his wife Catharine(dau of Wm., Lord Moleyns,) died. He married his 2nd wife, Margaret, dau of Sir John Chedworth, and in Apr was elected knight of the shire for Suffolk. He was employed in June 1468 in attending the king's sis Eliz to Flanders on her marriage with Charles, duke of Burgundy .

When Henry VI was restored he created Howard a baron by a writ of summons dated 15 Oct. 1470, making him Baron de Howard. Nevertheless, he appears to have remained faithful to the Yorkist cause. He commanded a fleet sent to oppose the Lancastrians & on Edward's landing in Mar, 1471 proclaimed him king in Suffolk. Was at the battles of Barnet & Tewkesbury. In June he was appointed deputy-governor of Calais, and after having sworn to maintain the succession of the Prince of Wales, crossed over on 3 June, and was engaged in negotiations with France. When Edward invaded France in July 1475 he was accompanied by Howard, who was one of the king's most trusted councillors during the expedition; he was one of the commissioners who made the truce at Amiens, received a pension from Louis XI, and met Philip de Commines to arrange the conference between the two kings at Picquigny. He remained in France as a hostage for a short time after Edward left, and on his return to England received from the king as a reward for his fidelity and prudence grants of several manors in Suffolk and Cambridgeshire. He also was sent to Scotland in command of a fleet. At the funeral of Edward in April 1483, Howard, who is styled the king's bannerer, bore the late king's banner. Next he attached himself to Richard of Gloucester, and became privy to all his plans and doings. He was appointed high steward of the duchy of Lancaster on 13 May, and a privy councillor, and on 28 June was created Duke of Norfolk and earl marshal with remainder to the heirs male of his body, the patent thus reviving the dignities held by the Mowbrays and Thomas of Brotherton, son of Edward I, from whom he was descended on the mother's side through females. He was concerned in persuading the widowed queen [Elizabeth Woodville] to deliver up her younger son the Duke of York, that he might be lodged with his brother in the Tower. At the coronation of Richard III on 6 July he acted as high steward, bore the crown, and as marshal rode into Westminster Hall after the ceremony. He was appointed admiral of England, Ireland, and Aquitaine.

Was with Richard on his visit to the north on 12 Sept. 1484 when he was nominated chief of the commissioners to treat with the ambassadors of James III of Scotland.

For the sake of his oath and his honour he would not desert the king. At Bosworth he commanded the vanguard, which was largely composed of archers, and he was slain in the battle on 22 Aug. He was buried in the conventual church of Thetford. He was attainted by act of the first parliament of Henry VII. By his first wife, Catharine, he had Thomas, earl of Surrey and second duke of Norfolk, and four daughters: Anne, married to Sir Edward Gorges of Wraxall, Somerset; Isabel, married to Sir Robert Mortimer of Essex; Jane, married to John Timperley; and Margaret, married to Sir John Wyndham of Crownthorpe and Felbrigg, Norfolk, ancestor of the Wyndhams, earls of Egremont. His second wife, who bore him one daughter, Catharine, married to John Bouchier, second lord Berners, survived him, married John Norreys, and died in 1494.

Early records of the name mention Walter de Chamberlayne, 1273, County Cambridge. Johannes Chaumburlyne, was listed in the Yorkshire Poll Tax of 1379. It was the name of a family of British politicians: Joseph (1836-1914) Liberal, advocate of tariff reform and colonial development: Sir Joseph Austen (1863-1937), his son, Liberal-Unionist and Conservative, foreign secretary 1924-9. Arthur Neville (1869-1940) half-brother of Austen, Conservative Prime Minister 1937-40. At first the coat of arms was a practical matter which served a function on the battlefield and in tournaments. With his helmet covering his face, and armour encasing the knight from head to foot, the only means of identification for his followers, was the insignia painted on his shield and embroidered on his surcoat, the flowing and draped garment worn over the armour. Since the dawn of civilisation the need to communicate has been a prime drive of all higher mankind. The more organised the social structure became, the more urgent the need to name places, objects and situations essential to the survival and existence of the social unit. From this common stem arose the requirements to identify families, tribes and individual members evolving into a pattern in evidence today. In the formation of this history, common usage of customs, trades, locations, patronymic and generic terms were often adopted as surnames. The demands of bureaucracy formally introduced by feudal lords in the 11th century, to define the boundaries and families within their fiefdoms, crystallized the need for personal identification and accountability, and surnames became in general use from this time onwards. The associated arms are recorded in Sir Bernard Burkes General Armory. Ulster King of Arms in 1884. This name, although originally the name of an official in charge of the private chambers of his master, later became a title of high rank

Notes for Alfred Knyvett:

This long-established surname is of Anglo-Norman origin, and derives from "cnivet", the Norman pronunciation of the Olde English pre 7th Century "cniht", owing to the French difficulty with the "h" of "cniht". The word originally meant "boy, youth, serving lad", later extended to mean "knight, a feudal tenant bound to serve his lord as a mounted soldier". Hence, it came to denote a man of some substance, since maintaining horses and armour was an expensive business. Knights in the last sense usually belonged to ancient noble families with distinguished family names of their own, so the surname is more likely to have been originally given as an occupational name to a servant in a knight's household, or as a nickname to someone who had played the part of a knight in a medieval pageant, or won the title in some contest of skill.
