Notes for James Nell Hicks:

Sir Ellis Hicks was made a knight bannerette by Edward, the Black Prince (son of King Edward III) September 9, 1356, for capturing a French standard at the battle of Poitiers in the 100 Years War. The descendants of Sir Ellis Hicks are; Robert Hicks > John Hicks > Baptist Hicks > James Hicks > Robert Hicks.

Robert Hicks, born 1583 in Southwark, London, England, arrived at Plymouth Colony on the "Fortune", which was the first ship to arrive after the "Mayflower", on November 11, 1621. Robert was from Bermondsey Street in Southwark, New London, England. Robert was one of the fifty-eight original Purchasers of Plymouth Colony. He was a fellmonger and a leather dresser while living in England. He was a man of education and active in the affairs of the colony until his death 24 March 1647. Robert married Margaret (Winslow) Hicks, who arrived in Plymouth Colony two years later (1623) on the Anne, with their three children, son Samuel, age 11, and daughters Lydia and Phoebe. A fourth child, Ephraim, was born in Plymouth in 1624. Robert Hicks died at Plymouth, MA 24 March 1647. There is little or no information on the relationship of James Nell to Robert Hicks, but the naming conventions of the descendants of James Nell would indicate a relationship.

Ruth Ann and James Nell Hicks had the following children:

12. i. Nathaniel Hicks was born in 1815 in KY. He died on 02 Feb 1892 in Dalton, Cass Co, TX. He married Nancy Carlton in 1844 in Jackson, Clarke Co, AL. She was born in 1823 in Jackson, Clarke Co, AL. She died on 26 Jun 1894 in Dalton, Cass Co, TX.

Notes for John Womack:

John Womack, son of William who settled in the 1760's or 1770's in Chatham County, North Carolina (Chatham County formed 1771 from Orange County). Chatham County court minutes for 1778 listed John Womack on a road jury. John Womack married around 1770(?) to Elenor Rorie, daughter of John Rorie of Halifax Co., No Co (The will of John Rorie, Sr., Halifax Co, NC, Will Book 3, page 31, named, among others, son-in-law John Womack, and four grandchildren, heirs of daughter Elenor Womack: James, Aner, Martha,, and Rorie Womack, Will dated 7 July 1782, probated Aug 1782,) After the death of his first wife, Elenor Rorie, John Womack took a common law wife, Susannah Allen. John Womack and family lived in that section of Chatham County which fell into Lee County, No C., in 1907, in the easternmost point of Lee County, near the Chatham County line and the Harnett County line, and about six miles northeast of the town of Broadway in Lee County. John Womack also owned land across the county line in Moore County (Moore County deeds destroyed up to 1889), but in that section of Moore County which fell into Lee County in 1907. John lived in Caswell Co, NC during the Revolutionary War. He received final war settlement in 1790, member of NC General Assembly, member legislature from Caswell Co, in 1787, House of Common form Person Co, in 1792. Elected to the Senate in 1800. All the land in North Carolina once belonged to the State (to the Crown in colonial days), but most of it has been granted the past three hundred years, a few acres at a time, to those settlers who applied for it and paid the required fee of a few cents per acre. There is a total of nearly a quarter of a million land grants on record in the Land Grant Office, Raleigh, North Carolina, ranging in size from a fraction of an acre to several thousand acres, but averaging between 100 and 150 acres per grant. Of the 32 million acres in North Carolina, 28 million acres were privately owned in 1950, and 4 million acres were public lands. The tillable and habitable acreage--the 28 million acres--was all taken up generations ago. A search through the files at the Land Grant Office revealed that between 1760 and 1910 three dozen grants were issued to various members of the Womack family. A detailed listing of the John Womack land grants in North Carolina appears below: Caswell County, File No. 25 - John Womack as guardian of John Tapley - 100 acres. Entry No. 15 - 100 acres. Notes for George Barber:

Oglethorpe County, in northeast Georgia, is the state's seventeenth county and comprises 441 square miles. Creek and Cherokee Indians lived there when the first white people arrived, but they lost their land through treaties signed in 1773. Fur trappers and traders traversed the area before the first non-Indians established permanent settlements. A few trappers established a temporary community known as Kennedy's Gate, but it was no longer extant by the time of the American Revolution (1775-83). At first the area was all part of Wilkes County, but Oglethorpe County, named for Georgia's founder James Oglethorpe, was carved from Wilkes in 1793 to accommodate population growth. Over the years Oglethorpe County has gained land from surrounding counties, sometimes in exchange for parts of itself. The first permanent white settlers, led by Revolutionary War veteran Colonel George Mathews to Georgia after the war, were a group of wealthy tobacco planters from Virginia. Residents later moved into cotton production with the invention of the cotton gin and the construction of railroads, which greatly assisted marketing efforts. After the plantation system lost its profitability in the aftermath of boll weevils, fire, war, and emancipation, the county's agriculture shifted to small farms, often operated on the sharecropping system. Grain, poultry, beef, and dairy cattle were among the county's major farm products. Farm income was augmented by employment in the lumber, granite, and textile industries.

Dorchester County is a county located in the U.S. state of Maryland on its Eastern Shore. It is bordered by the Choptank River to the northeast, Talbot County to the northwest, Caroline County to the northeast, Wicomico County to the southeast, Sussex County, Delaware to the east, and the Chesapeake Bay to the west. Dorchester County uses the slogan, "The Heart of Chesapeake Country," due to its geographical location and the heart-like shape of the county on a map. Settlers from England began to claim lands in the mid 1600's under land grants from Lord Baltimore and by 1669 Dorchester County was recognized as a County. It was named for the Earl of Dorset, a family friend of the Calverts (the founding family of the Maryland colony). Its county seat is Cambridge.

Notes for William Womack:

Formed originally as Henrico Shire, and shortly thereafter termed a "county," Henrico County was named for Henricus founded in 1611 by Sir Thomas Dale, a settlement wiped out during the Indian Massacre of 1622. Cape Henry at the southern mouth of the Chesapeake Bay, Henricus, Henrico Cittie, and later Henrico County, were all named for Henry Frederick, Prince of Wales, the eldest son of James I of England. Prince Henry showed great promise, and his death from typhoid fever at the age of eighteen was regarded as a tragedy for England. On, November 18, 1618, the Virginia Company of London, proprietor of the colony, gave instructions on the formation of a laudable government for the Colony to Sir George Yeardley when he departed from London to become full governor of Virginia. As directed, in 1619, Governor Yeardly established four large corporations, termed cities [sic], which were designated to encompass the developed portion of the colony. These were Kecoughtan (later renamed Elizabeth Cittie), James Cittie, Charles Cittie, and Henrico Cittie. In 1634, the King of England ordered the colony, which numbered about 5,000 settlers, to be divided into eight shires, or counties. One of these original shires (of which six are still considered extant) was Henrico County. Henrico County originally extended to both the north and south sides of the James River (named in 1607 for King James I). Henrico's first boundaries incorporated an area from which 10 Virginia counties were later formed in whole or in part, as well as the independent cities of Richmond, Charlottesville, and Colonial Heights. The original site of Henricus was located by archeologists late in the 20th century. On the south side of the James River (across from the original site of Varina, it is now in Chesterfield County, which developed Henricus Historical Park there.

Generation 11

1024. William Charles Augustus Womack, son of Lawrence Womack and Prudence, was born in 1575 in Exeter, Devon, England. He died in 1610 in England. He married Abriel Gower in 1606 in Henrico Co, VA.
1025. Abriel Gower was born in 1587 in Norfolk, England. She died in 1677 in Prince George Co, VA.
- Abriel Gower and William Charles Augustus Womack had the following children:
512. i. William Womack was born in 1607 in Wragby, Lincolnshire, England. He died on 01 Aug 1679 in Prince George Co, VA. He married Mary Jane Allen in 1643 in Prince George Co, VA. She was born on 07 May 1615 in Wragby, Lincolnshire, England. She died on 01 Jun 1685 in Prince George Co, VA.
- ii. Lawrence Womack was born on 12 May 1612 in Suffolk, England. He died on 12 Mar 1685 in St Margaret and St John the Evangelist Westminster, London, England.

Notes for Lawrence Womack:

The crest of Laurence Womack is a cross-crosslet and the arms are argent with a lion rampant gules. Basically it is a shield divided centrally from top to bottom. The left half has a black background with a gold cross touching each edge. Inside the gold cross are 5 black\blue stars positioned in each bar of the cross and one right in the centre. The right hand side of the crest is white in background with a red lion standing sideways (facing the centre) up on its hind legs. I have a photo of this crest on the pillar in St. Margarets Westminster.

WOMACK of Mettingham, Horringer, Boxted. Laurence W., Archdeacon of Suffolk, Bishop of St. Davids

"In the 1930's a Jesuit priest called father Ralph Baines did much research into the Spinkhill Mission i.e. The hidden centre of Catholic activity since the religious persecutions of 1600's. At the end of Father Baine's book, having dealt with all the priests and gentry, he makes the point that none of it would have flourished without the ordinary simple catholic people of the district. He then selects the family Womack - - Much has been written in these pages of recusancy, of penal laws, in a word - of persecution. It is refreshing to see the other side of the picture and record the sterling loyalty and patriotism of those whose names are recorded in the registers. We could not do better than to sketch the story of the family of Womac. They lived in Barlborough and Spinkhill certainly from the time of the reformation, the name is unusual. The name of Womac as pronounced by its owners - who were illiterate, takes curious forms, and finally ends up surprisingly aspirated as "Hummock". But what indeed was there in a name when sterling character was the mark of the breed?

We can trace four heads of the Barlborough family - granssire, son, grandson, and great grandson - respectively Ignatius, Francis I, FrancisII, FrancisIII b.1795. Ignatius was a man of gigantic stature, and a large mound marking his tomb used to be shown in "Squire Bowdon's Field". All the Womacs seem to have been of powerful build. It has even been suggested that the reason why spinkhill was never beaten up was that pursuivant or mobs coming from the South, would have to pass by Barlborough, which would mean negotiating the Womacs!

They were originally a Norman Family who had known better days. they had owned property in Nottingham and Durham. The latter branch suffered heavily for the faith, but clung loyally to it as did our Barlborough family."

English history around the 1600's was full of religious persecution which was why the Pilgrim Fathers set sail for America. I find it odd that one branch of the Womacks was so Catholic in spite of persecution and the other (Norfolk) branch was obviously happy to "go with the flow" and be Protestant hierarchy. Obviously prior to Henry VIII's dissolution of the monasteries all the Womack's would have been Catholic. Perhaps the main family Womack settled in Norfolk after Essex and then the Womack's not willing to renounce Catholicism after Henry's excommunication had to move Northwards to avoid persecution whilst those Womacks willing to bend to Henry's will stayed in Norfolk and were rewarded with office - just a thought. Incidentally the Womacks today are Methodists (as are most Yorkshire folk).

iii. Jane Womack was born in 1615 in VA.

1026. Timothy Allen, son of George Aleyne Allen and Katherine Watts, was born in 1594 in Wragby, Lincolnshire, England. He died on 03 Aug 1634 in Picardie, France. He married Abigail Worsham in 1615 in Wragby, Lincolnshire, England.

1027. Abigail Worsham was born in 1588 in Wragby, Lincolnshire, England. She died in 1660 in London, London, England.

1029. Kelly was born in 1606 in VA. She died in Prince George Co, VA.

Notes for "Jno" Jonathan Aekin:

Varina (Va-ry-nah), VA is a former unincorporated town and current magisterial district in the easternmost portion of Henrico County, Virginia, United States. Varina was named for Varina Farms, a plantation established by John Rolfe on the James River about 45 miles upstream from the first settlement at Jamestown in the Virginia Colony, and across the river from Sir Thomas Dale's 1611 settlement at Henricus. Varina became the county seat of Henrico when it was formed as one of the eight original shires of Virginia in 1634, and remained in that capacity until 1752, when a new courthouse was built at Richmond. In 1612, English colonist John Rolfe introduced the cultivation of a special strain of tobacco for export to England, which was much better-liked by the Europeans than a harsher form which grew naturally in Virginia. As his tobacco became a cash crop for the struggling colony's economy, he established a plantation estate at Varina Farms about 45 miles upstream from the first settlement at Jamestown and across the river from Sir Thomas Dale's 1611 settlement at the progressive community at Henricus. Henricus was developed as a potential replacement for the shortcomings of the Jamestown location. Varina Farms Plantation was named for a mild variety of the tobacco from Spain which was similar to the non-native strain Rolfe used in developing his successful product. The plantation became the home of Rolfe and his second wife, Pocahontas, the daughter of Chief Powhatan, head of the Native American Powhatan Confederacy for two years following their marriage in 1614. It was the birthplace of their son, Thomas Rolfe in 1615. The area which included Varina Farms Plantation was part of Henrico Cittie (sic), an incorporation formed in 1619 by the Virginia Company of London. Henricus was clearly the central development of Henrico Cittie. However, although Henricus was wiped out and not rebuilt after the Indian Massacre of 1622, a tiny village grew up on Rolfe's Plantation which was called both "Varina" and "Henrico Parish". When the original eight shires of Virginia (later renamed counties) were formed in 1634, Varina became the county seat of Henrico. Varina was established as an unincorporated town in 1680. It featured a courthouse, a church for Henrico Parish, and commercial buildings, such as a tavern. The Henrico Glebe house at Varina was the location where Reverend Dr. James Blair is believed to have drawn up the plans for new school which became the College of William and Mary in 1693 after his mission to England at the request of the House of Burgesses. The royal charter for the new school resurrected one of the dreams of the colonists which had been lost at Henricus in 1622.

Kelly and "Jno" Jonathan Aekin had the following children:

- 514. i. James Akin was born in 1631 in Varina, Henrico, VA. He died in Jan 1713 in Varina, Henrico, VA. He married Sarah Oliver in 1660 in Prince George Co, VA. She was born in 1639 in Prince George Co, VA. She died on 02 Aug 1714 in Prince George Co, VA.
- ii. William Aekin was born in Prince George Co, VA.

1030. James Oliver, son of Thomas Oliver and Margaret Ann Payne, was born in 1619 in Bristol, Gloucestershire, England. He died in 1682 in Boston, Middlesex, MA. He married Mary Dexter in 1660 in Plymouth, Plymouth, MA.

1031. Mary Dexter, daughter of Thomas Dexter and Elizabeth Baylies, was born in 1619 in Bristol, Gloucestershire, England. She died in 1680 in Barnstable, Middlesex, MA.

Mary Dexter and James Oliver had the following child:

- 515. i. Sarah Oliver was born in 1639 in Prince George Co, VA. She died on 02 Aug 1714 in Prince George Co, VA. She married James Akin in 1660 in Prince George Co, VA. He was born in 1631 in Varina, Henrico, VA. He died in Jan 1713 in Varina, Henrico, VA.

- 840. i. Robert Wallace was born in 1600 in Holmston, Ayrshire, Scotland. He died in Oct 1681 in St Quivox, Ayrshire, Scotland. He married Janet Wallace in 1628 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. She was born in 1608 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. She died in 1637 in Argyll, Scotland.
- ii. Samuel Wallace was born in 1635 in Holmston, Ayrshire, Scotland. He died in 1682 in Argyll, Scotland.

1682. William Wallace, son of William Wallace and Katherine Crawford, was born in 1580 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. He died in 1631 in Edinburgh, Midlothian, Scotland. He married Helen Roodman in 1607 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland.

1683. Helen Roodman was born in 1585 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. She died in 1620 in Argyll, Scotland.

Notes for William Wallace:

In 1616-1618, William Wallace stands first in the list of masons at Edinburgh Castle and was paid for making moulds for plasteres and carving window-boards in additions to a cartouche over a doorway that is noted as an accomplished specimen of Netherlands strapwork dated 1615 and stamped with Wallace's mark. It is not assumed that William Wallace was necessarily the chief agent in the change in style which is seen in so many Scottish buildings after 1615, but he is certainly the representative figure, and the style issues from the official quarter where he was the senior artificer. The reconstruction of Linlithgow Palace (dated 1619 and 1620) is also credited to William Wallace. Although, Wallace's most famous and significant building was begun eight years later. Heriot's Hospital at Edinburgh was founded under the will of George Heriot for the education of fatherless boys. He began it in 1628, but died before its completion in 1631. William Wallace died in 1631, but his style long survived him. Already in his lifetime it was caricatured at Caerlaverock (1620) and well imitated in 1628 at Moray House, Edinburgh, the town-house of a Countess of Home.

Helen Roodman and William Wallace had the following child:

- 841. i. Janet Wallace was born in 1608 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. She died in 1637 in Argyll, Scotland. She married Robert Wallace in 1628 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. He was born in 1600 in Holmston, Ayrshire, Scotland. He died in Oct 1681 in St Quivox, Ayrshire, Scotland.

1712. Nicholas Sumpter was born in 1600 in Histon, Cambridgeshire, England. He died on 02 Apr 1662 in Histon, Cambridgeshire, England. He married Alice Rudde on 23 Sep 1623 in Histon, Cambridgeshire, England.

1713. Alice Rudde, daughter of John Rudde and Prudence Skott, was born in 1602 in Cambridgeshire, England. She died in Feb 1662 in Histon, Cambridgeshire, England.

Alice Rudde and Nicholas Sumpter had the following children:

- i. Elisabeth Sumpter was born on 28 Oct 1624.
- ii. Nickola Sumpter was born about 1629 in Cambridge, Cambridgeshire, England. He died on 31 Aug 1693 in Cambridgeshire, England.
- iii. Alice Sumpter was born in 1631 in Histon, Cambridgeshire, England.
- iv. Richard Sumpter was born on 05 Jul 1640. He died in Cambridge, Cambridgeshire, England.

He married Mary in 1665 in Cambridge, Cambridgeshire, England. She was born in 1645 in Toft, Cambridgeshire, England. She died in 1700 in Cambridge, Cambridgeshire, England.

Generation 12

2048. Lawrence Womack, son of Arthur Womack and Alice Rouse, was born on 12 May 1550 in Exeter, Devon, England. He died in Jul 1642 in Exeter, Devon, England. He married Prudence.
2049. Prudence was born in 1550 in Kent, England. She died in 1595 in England.

Notes for Prudence:

Early in Henry VII's reign, the Royal pretender, Perkin Warbeck, besieged Exeter in 1497. The King himself came down to judge the prisoners and to thank the citizens for their loyal resistance. Great disturbances throughout the county followed the introduction of Edward VI's Book of Common Prayer. The day after Whit Sunday 1549, a priest at Sampford Courtenay was persuaded to read the old mass. This insubordination spread swiftly into serious revolt. The Cornish quickly joined the men of Devon in the Prayer Book Rebellion and Exeter suffered a distressing siege until relieved by Lord Russell. Devon is particularly known for its Elizabethan mariners, such as Sir Francis Drake, Gilbert, Sir Richard Grenville and Sir Walter Raleigh. Plymouth Hoe is famous as the location where Drake continued to play bowls after hearing that the Spanish Armada had been sighted. Plymouth was the departure point for the Mayflower in 1620. During the Civil War, Devon largely favoured the Parliamentary cause, but there was a great desire for peace in the region and, in 1643 a treaty for the cessation of hostilities in Devon and Cornwall was agreed. Only small-scale skirmishes continued until the capture of Dartmouth and Exeter in 1646 by Sir Thomas Fairfax. He then captured Tiverton and defeated Lord Hopeton's army at Torrington. The last place held for the king was Charles Fort at Salcombe. After the Monmouth Rebellion in 1685, Judge Jefferies held one of his 'bloody assizes' at Exeter. In 1688, the Prince of Orange first landed in England at Brixham (where his statue stands in the town harbour) to launch the Glorious Revolution and his journey to London to claim the English throne as William III. He was entertained for several days at both Forde and at Exeter.

Prudence and Lawrence Womack had the following child:

- 1024. i. William Charles Augustus Womack was born in 1575 in Exeter, Devon, England. He died in 1610 in England. He married Abriel Gower in 1606 in Henrico Co, VA. She was born in 1587 in Norfolk, England. She died in 1677 in Prince George Co, VA.

2053. Katherine Watts was born in 1576 in Woking, Surrey, England. She died in 1656 in Sandwich, Barnstable, MA.

Katherine Watts and George Aleyne Allen had the following child:

- 1026. i. Timothy Allen was born in 1594 in Wragby, Lincolnshire, England. He died on 03 Aug 1634 in Picardie, France. He married Abigail Worsham in 1615 in Wragby, Lincolnshire, England. She was born in 1588 in Wragby, Lincolnshire, England. She died in 1660 in London, London, England.
2060. Thomas Oliver, son of John Oliver and Elizabeth Rowland, was born on 14 Apr 1582 in Bristol, Gloucestershire, England. He died on 01 Jun 1658 in Boston, Middlesex, MA. He married Margaret Ann Payne.

2061. Margaret Ann Payne was born in 1591. She died in 1636 in MA.

Notes for Thomas Oliver:

Thomas Oliver, son of John Oliver (2), was born in Bristol, in 1582, baptized there at St. Stephen's Church, April* 14. 1582. He was the immigrant. He came to New England in the ship "William and Frances" from London in 1632, bringing his wife Ann and children, arriving June 9. He was admitted a freeman in 1632; was selectman. He was one of the founders of the First Church of Boston (now of Chauncey Place) and became ruling elder, a man of great influence and usefulness in Boston. His wife Ann died May, 1635, and he married second, about 1637, Anne Purchase, widow of Oliver Purchase, Sr. His daughter-in-law, Sarah Purchase, was admitted to the church May 31, 1646; his wife November 27, 1642. She died December 20. 1662. He died June 1, 1658, and his death is thus recorded in Hull's Diary: "Mr. Thomas Oliver, one of the ruling elders of the church died being ninety years old (he was probably about eighty. If the date of baptism is correct it seems that he was not much over seventy-five. The date of children's births indicates that he was not ninety years old. Hull has the date of death wrong also). He was a man of his outward profession, a surgeon (doctor). He kept his house, or went very little abroad for the space of three years before he died, and was a lively pattern of old age spoken of in Eccles. xii; though in his former years a man very serviceable." (Those who think he was from Lewes in Sussex, England, born 1568, accept his age at death as ninety to support this theory). His will dated March 13, 1652, was proved January 27, 1657; mentions John, Peter, James, Samuel, Abigail, daughters Woodfall and Havens; Richard Woodfall at Muddy River: Hannah Tarne; grandchildren in old as well as New England. Children: 1. John, admitted to church in 1632; born according to one account in 1616, probably about 1610. 2. Peter, admitted to church June 23, 1639, born about 1617. 3. Samuel, admitted to church May 21, 1643, born about 1619. 4. Abigail, admitted to church July 30, 1643, married James Johnson. 5. James, born 1620, admitted to church June 13, 1640. 6. Nathaniel, died November, 1633, aged fifteen. 7. Daniel, died June, 1637

Margaret Ann Payne and Thomas Oliver had the following children:

- i. Peter Oliver was born in 1609 in Bristol, Gloucestershire, England. He died on 11 Apr 1670 in Barnstable, Middlesex, MA.
- ii. John Oliver was born in 1616 in Bristol, Gloucestershire, England. He died on 12 Apr 1646 in Boston, Middlesex, MA.

Notes for William Wallace:

Wallace of Elderslie (1) The name 'Wallace' (probably derived from Galleius, with many variations such as Walleis) is believed to imply that this family originated in either Wales or (perhaps more likely) the Cymbric (Cimbric) kingdom of Strathclyde which at one time covered much of the middle-western half of Great Britain. It is thought likely that the family was one of the many that made a mark in Scotland in King David's 'administrative revolution' in the second quarter of the 12th century. However, it is not clear how long the family had been in Scotland by that time - it may have come to Scotland shortly before or even during King David's reign (1124-1153). (2) Much interest has been focused on this family because of its most famous son, Sir William Wallace, who was Guardian of Scotland during a key part of 'The Wars of Independence'. However, rather than help clarify the genealogy of the family, that interest has managed to obscure it because so many contradictory descents have been produced. To date no 'definitive' pedigree has yet been found.

Janet Hamilton and William Wallace had the following children:

- 3364. i. William Wallace was born in 1555 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. He died on 06 Apr 1611 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. He married Katherine Crawford in 1579 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. She was born in 1555 in Renfrewshire, Scotland. She died on 06 Apr 1611 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland.
- ii. James Wallace was born in 1555 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. He died in 1603 in Muirhead, Hunterdon, NJ.
- iii. John Wallace was born in 1570 in Elderslie, Renfrewshire, Scotland. He died in Dec 1651 in Renfrew, Renfrewshire, Scotland.
- 6730. Hugh Crawford, son of Lawrence Crawford and Helen Campbell, was born in 1521 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland. He died in 1576 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland. He married Margaret Colquhoun in 1550 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland.
- 6731. Margaret Colquhoun was born in 1530 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland. She died in 1561 in Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland.

Notes for Hugh Crawford:

Kilbirnie (Gaelic Cille Bhranaidh) is a small town situated in North Ayrshire on the west coast of Scotland. Kilbirnie derived its name from the parish church and the church obtained its name from the saint to whom it was dedicated; the celtic Cil, pronounced Kil, signifying a church, being prefixed to the name of the saint; St Birnie, or Birinus, is said to have been a bishop and confessor who converted the West Saxons. In the early years of Mary Queen of Scot's reign, foreign invasions were a constant threat. The English wanted more than soothing diplomacy from the Queen Mother - Mary of Guise - they wanted custody of little Mary herself, in order to marry her to their child-king Edward VI. The result was another in the series of invasions known to later history as 'the Rough Wooing' and the catastrophic Scots defeat at the battle of Pinkiecleuch, on 10 September 1547. William Patten, a Londoner (as he proudly styles himself on the title page of his work), came to Scotland with the invasion force and saw for himself the dreadful carnage left in the wake of the successful English assault. To the Scottish Catholic church, the English invaders were heretics, and a good turn-out of church men and their vassals was a feature of the Scottish side. Alas, the Kirk militant had little success. The battle was a disaster, with casualties greater than at Flodden. Mary had to be spirited to safety at the island priory of Inchmahome whilst arrangements were made to evacuate her to France. Soon after this notable strewing of their footmen's weapons, began a pitiful sight of the dead corpses lying dispersed abroad, some their legs off, some but houghed, and left lying half-dead, some thrust quite through the body, others the arms cut off, diverse their necks half a sunder, many their heads cloven, of sundry the brains pasht out, some others again their heads quite off, with other many kinds of killing. After that and further in chase, all for the most part killed either in the head or in the neck, for our horsemen could not well reach the lower with their swords. And thus with blood and slaughter of the enemy, this chase was continued five miles in length westward from the place of their standing, which was in the fallow fields of Inveresk until Edinburgh Park and well nigh to the gates of the town itself and unto Leith, and in breadth nigh 4 miles, from the Firth sands up toward Dalkeith southward. In all which space, the dead bodies lay as thick as a man may note cattle grazing in a full replenished pasture. The river ran all red with blood, so that in the same chase were counted, as well by some of our men that somewhat diligently did mark it as by some of them taken prisoners, that very much did lament it, to have been slain above 14 thousand. In all this compass of ground what with weapons, arms, hands, legs, heads, blood and dead bodies, their flight might have been easily tracked to every of their three refuges. And for the smallness of our number and shortness of the time (which was scant five hours, from one to well nigh six) the mortality was so great, as it was thought, the like aforetime not to have been seen. Indeed it was the better maintained with their own swords that lay each where scattered by the way, whereof our men, as they had broke one still took up another; there was store enough, and they laid it on freely, that right many among them at this business broke three or four ere they returned homeward to the army. I may well perchance confess, that herein we used some sharpness (although not as much as we might) and little courtesy, and yet I can safely avow, all done by us, as rather by sundry respects driven and compelled, then either of cruelty or delight in slaughter. And like someway to the diligent master that sharply sometime (when warning will not serve) doth beat his scholar, not hardly for hate of child, or his own delight in beating, but for love he would have him amend his faults or negligence and beats him once surely because he would need to beat him no more. One cause of the correction we used, I may well count to be their tyrannous vow they made (which we certainly heard of) that whensoever they fought and overcame, they would slay so many, and spare so few, a sure proof of whereof they plainly had showed at our onset before, where they killed all, and saved not a man. Another respect was to revenge their great and cruel tyranny shown at Panyarhough [the battle of Ancrum Moor, 1545 - a Scottish victory] where they slew the Lord Evers [Sir Ralph Eure] and cruelly killed as many else of our men as came in their hands . . . Another thing and not the meanest matter was that their armour amongst them so little differed, and their apparel so base and beggarly, wherein the Lurdein [rascal] was in a manner all one with the Lord, and the loun [commoner] with the laird: all clad alike in jacks covered with white leather, doublets of the same or of fustian and most commonly all white hose. Not one with either chain, brooch, ring or garment of silk that I could see, unless chains of latten drawn four or five times along the thighs of their hose and doublet sleeves for cutting; and of that sort I saw many. This vileness of port [appearance], was the cause that so many of their great men and gentlemen were killed and so few saved. The outward show, the semblance and sign whereby a stranger might discern a villein from a gentleman was not among them to be seen. As for words and goodly proffer of great ransoms, [they] were as common and rife in the mouths of the one as of the other. And therefore hereby it came to pass that after, at the examination and counting of the prisoners we found taken about above twenty of their villeins to one of their gentlemen: whom no man need to doubt, we had rather have spared, then the villeins, if we could have known any difference between them in taking. And yet notwithstanding all these our just causes and quarrels to kill them, we showed more grace and took more to mercy then the case on our side, for the cause aforesaid did well deserve or require . . . for the prisoners accounted by the Marshal's book were numbered to above 1500. Touching the slaughter, sure we killed nothing so many as (if we had minded cruelty so much) for the time and opportunity right well we might, for my Lord's grace, of his wonted mercy, much moved with the pity of this sight, and rather glad of victory, than desirous of cruelty, soon after (by guess) five of the clock stayed his standard of his horsemen at the furthest part of their camp westward and caused the trumpets to blow a retreat. Whereat Sir Ralph Sadler treasurer (whose great diligence at the time and ready forwardness in the chiefest of the fray before did worthily merit no small commendation) caused all the footmen to stay and then with much travail and great pain, made them to be brought into some order again. It was a thing yet not easily to be done, by reason they all as then somewhat busily applied their market to the spoil of the Scottish camp, wherein were found good provision of white bread, ale, oatcakes, oatmeal, mutton, butter in pots, cheese and in diverse tents good wine also; good store to say truth, of good victual for the manner of the country. And in some tents among them (as I heard say) were also found of silver plate a dish or two, 2 or 3 goblets and 3 or 4 chalices, the which the finders (I know not with what reverence but with some devotion hardly) plucked out of the cold clouts and thrust into their warm bosoms... It was a wonder to see, but that (as they say) many hands make light work, how soon the dead bodies were stripped out of their garments stark naked, even from as far as the chase went until the place of our onset; whereby the personages of our enemies might by the way easily be viewed and considered; the which for tallness of stature, cleanness of skin, bigness of bone with due proportion of all parts, I for my part advisedly noted to be such, as but that I saw that it was so, I would not have believed sure so many of that sort to have been in all their country. Among them lay there many priests and kirkmen, as they call them, of whom it was bruited amongst us, that there was a whole band of 3 or 4 thousand, but we were after informed, it was not altogether so... Among these [the Scots] weapons and beside several other banners, standards and pennons, a banner of white sarcenet was found under which it was said these kirkmen came, whereupon was painted a woman with her hair about her shoulders, kneeling before a crucifix, and on her right hand a church; after that written a long upon a banner in great roman letters afflictæ sponsæ ne obliviscaris [Do not forget your afflicted spouse]; which words declared that they would have this woman to signify the church, Christ's spouse and thus in humble wise making her petition unto Christ her husband that he would not now forget her, his spouse, being scourged and persecuted, meaning at this time by us. It was said it was the Abbot of Dunfermline's banner; but whether it was his or the Bishop of Dunkeld's, the governor's brothers [brothers of the Regent Arran] (who I understand were both in the field) and what the number of kirkmen was, I could not certainly learn: but I was sure it was some devout papist's device, that not only be like would not endeavor to do ought for atonement and peacemaking between us, but all contrariwise brought forth his standard stoutly to fight in field himself against us; pretexting this his great ungodliness thus bent toward the maintenance of a naughty quarrel with colour of religion to come in aid of Christ's church. Which church to say truth, coming thus to battle full appointed with weapon and guarded with such sort of deacons to fight; however in painting he had set her out, a man might well think in that in condition he had rather framed a cursed quean [hussy] that would pluck her husband by the pate except she had her will, than like a meek spouse that went about humbly by submission and prayer to desire her husband's help for redress of things amiss. Notes for Sir George Ayr Campbell:

"The Campbells they are a' in arms,

Their loyal faith and truth to show,

With banners rattling in the wind,

The Campbells are coming Ho-Ro, Ho-Ro!"

--from "The Campbells Are Coming" a traditional pipe tune

This ancient Scottish name has its origins in a Gaelic nickname "Caimbeul", meaning "wry (or crooked) mouth", from "dam", bent or crooked, and "beul", mouth. That it was originally a nickname can be seen by a charter of 1447, which records Duncan le Cambeli, the first Lord Campbell, the "le" being the Scottish "lie", meaning "so called", or "known as". A sizeable group of early European surnames were gradually created from the habitual use of nicknames. These were given in the first instance with reference to occupation, or to a variety of characteristics, such as physical attributes or peculiarities, mental and moral characteristics, supposed resemblance to an animal's or bird's appearance or disposition, or to habits of dress. Clan tradition has it, that the Campbells were originally known as "Clana Duibhne" or "O'Duine", from one Diarmid O'Duine of Lochow. About 1390, Duncan Campbell witnessed a charter by Duncan, Earl of Levenax, and is believed to be the first namebearer to introduce a "p" into the name, influenced by the erroneous theory that "Cam(p)bell" comes from the Norman-French "de Campobello" i.e., "of the beautiful plain". Campbell is the family name of the hereditary Dukes of Argyll, dating from 1445, and their Coat of Arms is described thus: "Quarterly, first and fourth, gyronny of eight gold and black, the Crest being a boar's head couped gold". The first recorded spelling of the family name is shown to be that of Gillespic

Cambel, which was dated 1263, in the "Exchequer Rolls of Scotland", during the reign of King Alexander 111 of Scotland, 1249 - 1286. Surnames became necessary when governments introduced personal taxation. In England this was known as Poll Tax. Throughout the centuries, surnames in every country have continued to "develop" often leading to astonishing variants of the original spelling.

Colin Campbell, 6th Laird of Glenorchy and son of Sir George Campbell, was called Grey Colin for the color of his hair and beard. He expanded the power of his branch of Clan Campbell eastward through the Glens of Breadalbane and up against the land's of the Stewart Earls of Atholl in Perthshire. What better way to consolidate and secure his eastern borders than to arrange the marriage of his son 'Black' Duncan Campbell with Janet Stewart, daughter of the 4th Earl of Atholl?

In 16th Century Scotland, an earl was roughly two or three ranks above a laird and much more politically powerful because earls sat in Parliament. The marriage of Duncan and Janet was a smart move for the Breadalbane Campbells and shows their growing strength.

Colin's alliances and connections in all directions increased the Breadalbane Campbells' wealth and influence. Since he did not like to travel, Grey Colin sent his son Black Duncan as emissary to Edinburgh where Duncan became good friends with James VI, the first Protestant king of Scotland.

During the 6th Laird's lifetime, in the mid to late 1500's, many Clan Campbell members joined the Reformation and converted to Protestantism. The clan chief, Lord Archibald Campbell, 4th Earl of Argyll, became a Presbyterian before he died in 1558. His son, the 5th Earl of Argyll and Colin's superior kinsman, was a devout Protestant who played an important role in the events involving Mary Queen of Scots. Colin's father-in-law William, Lord Ruthven, was an early Protestant supporter before he died in 1552.

Along with the majority of Scots, especially the Lowlanders and the townspeople, Colin and his other subordinate clansmen became followers of John Knox, the founder of Presbyterianism. Some clans (Erskines, Camerons, Oliphants) who had close contacts with the English joined the Church of England.

A significant number of the old Highland clans were more conservative and stayed Roman Catholic for some time (MacDonalds, MacLeans, MacGregors, Gordons). This set the Campbells at odds with several neighboring clans. Many Campbells were killed supporting their new faith and defending their holdings against raiding Catholic clans. There were atrocities and bad feelings on both sides for the next two centuries. Catholic neighbors even accused some Campbells of witchcraft.

The Campbells generally supported the Protestant Stewart kings while Scottish Highlander Catholics supported the exiled Stuarts (Jacobites) who were based in France and encouraged by Rome. But there were times in the early 1700's when some Campbells joined the Jacobites after the English picked George I, a "wee German lairdie" (little German squire), to be the King of Great Britain.

Many Campbells did well under the British kings after England and Scotland were united. Several became members of the Scottish branch of the British nobility. The Earls of Argyll moved up to become Dukes, the top ranking nobility, while Colin's descendants eventually became the Earls and then Marquesses of Breadalbane.

For the past 400 years, the British Army has recruited heavily from Clan Campbell and its associated families. At least 16 different Campbell-based Highlander regiments have moved up into the line of battle with their bagpipers playing "The Campbells Are Coming."

- 32768. i. William Womuke was born in 1470 in East Dereham, Norfolk, England. He died in East Dereham, Norfolk, England.

65548. Sir Edmund Knyvett, son of Sir William John Knyvett and Lady Alice De Grey, was born in 1462 in Buckenham, Norfolk, England. He died on 20 Dec 1528 in Buckenham, Norfolk, England. He married Eleanor Tyrrell in 1481 in Wymondham, Norfolk, England.

65549. Eleanor Tyrrell, daughter of Sir William Tyrell and Margaret Darcy, was born in 1466 in Gipping, Suffolk, England. She died in 1514 in London, Middlesex, England.

Eleanor Tyrrell and Sir Edmund Knyvett had the following children:

- i. Sir Thomas Knyvett was born in 1482 in Buckenham, Norfolk, England. He died on 14 Dec 1512 in Norfolk, England.

Notes for Sir Thomas Knyvett:

Sir Thomas Knyvett (also Knevitt or Knivet or Knevet), of Buckenham, Norfolk (died on 10 August 1512) was a young English nobleman who was a close associate of King Henry VIII shortly after that monarch came to the throne. According to Hall's Chronicle[1], Knyvett was a frequent participant in the jousts and pageants of the new king's glittering court. When Henry declared war on France in 1512, Knyvett, along with Sir John Carew, was given command of the royal flagship, the Regent. With a number of court favourites commanding other vessels, a small fleet set sail for the coast of Brittany. On 10 August 1512 they engaged a slightly larger French fleet, and a violent melee ensued in Brest. Knyvett's ship grappled with the French command vessel, and was engaged in boarding her when the French powder magazine blew up (some say it was deliberately ignited). The two vessels burst into flame. Knyvett and Carew both perished, along with the French captain and more than 1,700 men, both French and English.

Knyvett was married before July 1506 as her second husband to Lady Muriel Howard (died in childbirth Lambeth, 14 December 1512, interred 8 January 1513), by whom he had two children. She was the widow of John Grey, 2nd Viscount Lisle and 4th Baron Lisle and the mother of Elizabeth Grey, 5th Baroness Lisle, who was once engaged to Charles Brandon, 1st Duke of Suffolk. Lady Muriel was the daughter of Thomas Howard, 2nd Duke of Norfolk (1443-1524) and Elizabeth Tilney, and through the Howard connection, Knyvett was related to many of the great figures of English history (his brother-in-law, for example, was Thomas Boleyn, father of Queen Anne, and grandfather of Queen Elizabeth I).

- 32774. ii. Sir Edmund Knyvett was born in 1490 in Ashwellthorpe, Norfolk, England. He died on 01 May 1546 in Ashwellthorpe, Norfolk, England. He married Jane 3rd Dutchess Bouchier on 04 Nov 1561 in Norfolk, England. She was born in 1486 in Ashwellthorpe, Norfolk, England. She died on 17 Feb 1561 in Ashwellthorpe, Norfolk, England.
- iii. Anne Knyvett was born in 1492 in Buckenham Castle, Norfolk, England. She died in 1558 in Monkleigh, Devon, England.

65550. Sir John (2nd Lord Baron Berners) Bouchier, son of Sir Humphrey Bouchier and Countess Elizabeth of Surrey Tilney, was born on 20 Jul 1467 in Ashwellthorpe, Norfolk, England. Notes for Margaret Darcy:

Margaret Darcy, daughter of Sir Robert Darcy, Keeper of the Writs of Common Pleas, Burgess of Malden and Alice Filongley

Margaret Darcy and Sir William Tyrell had the following children:

- i. Sir James Tyrell was born in 1445. He died on 06 May 1502.

Notes for Sir James Tyrell:

Sir James Tyrell, Sheriff of Glamorganshire, Master of the Horse to King Richard III, Constable of Cardiff Castle, Chamberlain of the Exchequer b. 1445, d. 6 May 1502 Tyrell, Sir James (c.1455-1502), royal councillor, was the eldest son of William Tyrell of Gipping, Suffolk [see Tyrell family (per. c.1304-c.1510)], and his wife, Margaret, daughter of Robert Darcy of Maldon in Essex. William was executed for his involvement with John de Vere, the earl of Oxford, in a conspiracy against Edward IV in February 1462, but he was not attainted, and the custody of his land and of his heir James was bought from Cecily Neville, dowager duchess of York, by William's widow and her feoffees for £50 in March 1463. In 1471 James fought for the Yorkists at Tewkesbury, where he was knighted by Edward IV. By the following winter he was in the service of Richard, duke of Gloucester. He became a ducal councillor and feoffee, and was used by Richard on sensitive business such as conducting the dowager countess of Warwick northwards in 1473. He served under the duke in the Scottish campaigns of 1480-82 and was made banneret by him. He was the duke's nominee as chamberlain of the exchequer, and in November 1482 was commissioned to act in Gloucester's office of constable of England.

Tyrell acquired interests in the south-west through his marriage in 1469 to Anne, the daughter of John Arundel of Lanherne, Cornwall, and his first wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas, Lord Morley. He was knight of the shire for Cornwall in 1478, and in June 1483 he was elected for the abortive parliament of Edward V. After Gloucester's accession Tyrell became a knight of the body, and his name was put forward as a candidate for the Garter, although he was not chosen. He was master of the king's horse and of the henchmen. He played a role in the suppression of the rebellion of Henry Stafford, the duke of Buckingham, and was one of those who escorted the captured duke to the king at Salisbury. He was rewarded with the stewardship of the duchy of Cornwall for life and with the land that he had been disputing with his wife's half-brother, the rebel Thomas Arundel. But Richard employed him primarily in Wales, a connection already established in Edward IV's reign, when Tyrell had been the duke's sheriff of Glamorgan and steward of Morgannwg. After Buckingham's execution, Tyrell was prominent among the royal servants who were given authority to seize and administer the duke's forfeited Welsh estates and to reassert authority over the crown lands in Wales.

In spite of Tyrell's importance in Wales, Richard made him lieutenant of Guînes on 22 January 1485, during the illness of John, Lord Mountjoy; the defection to Tudor of Mountjoy's brother James Blount in the previous autumn had compromised royal control of the Calais fortresses. Tyrell was specifically charged to fulfil the post in person, and to leave south Wales to his subordinates-an order that shows the limited circle of people upon whom Richard was now prepared to rely. Tyrell was accordingly out of England when Richard was defeated at Bosworth and was able to transfer his services to Henry VII, who kept him in office at Guînes. But he lost the importance he had enjoyed under Richard III, as well as his other gains from that king, including the disputed Arundel lands. He was evidently still not fully in the king's favour in 1486. A regrant in February of two of his Welsh offices proved only temporary, and in June and July Tyrell thought it worth securing two royal pardons, one for himself and the other for himself and the Guînes garrison. But in December he was an ambassador to Maximilian, king of the Romans, and by 1488 he had again become a knight of the body. In February 1488 the king promised him compensation for his lost Welsh offices, valued by Tyrell at £3000 over three years. He was involved in the negotiations leading to the treaty of Étaples in 1492, and in 1495 he was one of the feoffees to the use of Henry VII's will.

Tyrell's downfall began obliquely. In 1499 Edmund de la Pole, earl of Suffolk, fled to Flanders and spent time with Tyrell at Guînes on the way-an episode later to be cited as the first of Tyrell's 'divers offences' against the king. Suffolk was persuaded to return to England, but fled again in the summer of 1501, and sought the help of Maximilian in making himself king. In the following spring Thomas Lovell was sent to Guînes to arrest Tyrell and a group of associates, including his son Thomas. James Tyrell was convicted of treason at the London Guildhall on 2 May and executed on 6 May. He was buried in the London church of the Austin friars, where his father was also buried. Tyrell was attainted on 25 January 1504, and the attainder was reversed on 19 April 1507.

It is as the murderer of the 'princes in the Tower'-the sons of Edward IV-that Tyrell is now usually remembered. The identification rests on a confession that Tyrell was said to have made between his condemnation and execution. No copy of the confession survives, but according to the version circulating among subsequent writers, Richard commanded the constable of the Tower, Sir Robert Brackenbury, to have the princes killed, and when Brackenbury hesitated Tyrell was sent to do the job instead-'sorrowfully', according to Polydore Vergil. The best-known version of the story is Thomas More's elaborately circumstantial account which is, however, demonstrably inaccurate in detail, notably in the lowly status assigned to Tyrell before the murder. Whatever its validity, the dissemination of Tyrell's 'confession' finally disposed of claims that the princes were still alive. If Tyrell's closeness to Richard III made him a plausible murderer, he was also (from the Tudor point of view) a very convenient one.

65549. ii. Eleanor Tyrrell was born in 1466 in Gipping, Suffolk, England. She died in 1514 in London, Middlesex, England. She married Sir Edmund Knyvett in 1481 in Wymondham, Norfolk, England. He was born in 1462 in Buckenham, Norfolk, England. He died on 20 Dec 1528 in Buckenham, Norfolk, England.

131102. Sir John 1st Duke of Norfolk 'Earl Marshal' Howard Kg, son of Robert Howard Sir and Margaret De Mowbray, was born in 1420 in Tendring, Essex, England. He died on 22 Aug 1485 (Near Ambion Hill, south of Market Bosworth, England). He married Margaret Chedworth.

131103. Margaret Chedworth was born in 1424 in Buckinghamshire, England. She died on 03 Dec 1494 in Stoke By Nayland, Suffolk, England.

Notes for Sir John 1st Duke of Norfolk 'Earl Marshal' Howard Kg:

John Howard, 1st Duke of Norfolk, KG, Earl Marshal (1421- 22 August 1485) was an English nobleman, soldier, and the first Howard Duke of Norfolk. He was a close friend and loyal supporter of King Richard III of England[1] with whom he died in combat at the Battle of Bosworth.

Career

John Howard was the son of Sir Robert Howard (1385-1436) and the former Lady Margaret de Mowbray (1388-1459), eldest daughter of Thomas de Mowbray, 1st Duke of Norfolk (of the first creation) (1366-1399) and Lady Elizabeth FitzAlan (1366-1425). His paternal grandparents were Sir John Howard of Wighenham, Norfolk and Alice Tendring. He was known as "Jack (or "Jock", hence "Jockey") of Norfolk", and he was described as being a "man of average height, with a strong, square face".[2] The Howards were staunch adherents of the House of York during the Wars of the Roses, and John Howard, backed by his powerful Mowbray relations, upheld the Yorkist cause in Norfolk. After demonstrating his military prowess on the field during the Battle of Towton, he won the admiration of Edward IV of England who made him Constable of Norwich Castle, Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, and Treasurer of the Royal Household. He was summoned to Parliament as Lord Howard on 15 October 1470.[3] He was appointed Lord High Steward and walked in front of King Richard III of England, carrying the crown at his coronation. His eldest son, Thomas, Earl of Surrey carried the sword of state. For his support of King Richard III during the deposition of King Edward V in 1483, he was created The Duke of Norfolk, third creation, on 28 June 1483.[3] The first creation of the Dukedom of Norfolk had become extinct on the death of the 4th Duke in 1476, and the second creation had been invalidated by the illegitimisation of the 1st Duke of York (one of the Princes in the Tower, who was also 1st Duke of Norfolk) on 25 June 1483. Norfolk was also created Earl Marshal, and Lord Admiral of all England, Ireland, and Aquitaine.

Marriage

John Howard was married firstly in 1442 to Katherine Moleyns (1429 - 3 November 1465), the daughter of William de Moleyns and Anne Whalesborough of Cornwall by whom he had six children;[3] and then secondly sometime before 22 January 1467 to Margaret Chedworth (1436-1494), the daughter of Sir John Chedworth and Margaret Bowett by whom he had one daughter.[4] Margaret Bowett's parents were Nicholas Bowett of Rippingale, Lincolnshire, England and Elizabeth La Zouche of Harringworth, Northampton, England.

List of children

By his first wife, Katherine Moleyns he had the following six children:[3] Thomas Howard, 2nd Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Surrey (1443-21 May 1524), married firstly on 30 April 1472 as her second husband Elizabeth Tilney by whom he had nine children including Thomas Howard, 3rd Duke of Norfolk and Elizabeth Howard, wife of Sir Thomas Boleyn; he married secondly, in 1497, Agnes Tilney, by whom he had eight children. Anne Howard, married Sir Edmund Gorges of Wraxhall by whom she had issue. Isabel Howard, married Sir Robert Mortimer by whom she had issue. Joan Howard (died 1508), married in 1481 Sir John Timperley of Hintlesham, Suffolk. Margaret Howard, married Sir John Wyndham of Crownthorpe by whom she had issue. Nicholas Howard.

By his second wife, Margaret Chedworth he had one daughter: Katherine Howard (died 17 March 1536), married John Bouchier, 2nd Baron Berners by whom she had issue.

Death

John Howard died at the Battle of Bosworth Field on 22 August 1485 along with his friend and patron King Richard.[5] Howard was the commander of the vanguard, and his son, the Earl of Surrey, his lieutenant. Howard was killed when a Lancastrian arrow struck him in the face after the face guard had been torn off his helmet during an earlier altercation with the Earl of Oxford.[6] He was slain prior to King Richard, which had a demoralising effect on the king. The night before, someone had left John Howard a note attached to his tent warning him that King Richard III, his "master," was going to be double-crossed (which he was): "Jack of Norfolk, be not too bold, For Dickon, thy master, is bought and sold." [7] He was buried in Thetford Priory, but his body seems to have been moved at the Reformation, possibly to the tomb of the 3rd Duke of Norfolk at Framlingham Church. The monumental brass of his first wife Katherine Moleyns can, however, still be seen in Suffolk. Howard was the great-grandfather of Anne Boleyn and Catherine Howard, the second and fifth Queens consort, respectively, of King Henry VIII. Thus, through Anne Boleyn, he was the great-great-grandfather of Elizabeth I.

His titles were declared forfeit after his death by King Henry VII, but his son, the 1st Earl of Surrey, was later restored as 2nd Duke (the Barony of Howard, however, remains forfeit). His senior descendants, the Dukes of Norfolk, have been Earls Marshal and Premier Peers of England since the 17th century, and male-line descendants hold the Earldoms of Carlisle, Suffolk, Berkshire and Effingham.

1st Duke of Norfolk of the Howard family, son & heir of Sir Robert Howard by Margaret, dau of Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, & cousin & ultimately coheir of John Mowbray, 4th duke of Norfolk (d. 1475). He entered the service of his kinsman John Mowbray, 3rd duke of Norfolk. He was of service to the Yorkist cause, for on the accession of Edward IV in 1461 he was knighted, appointed constable of Colchester Castle, sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk, and one of the king's carvers, and was known to have 'great fellowship' with the king. In 1462 he was appointed constable of Norwich Castle, and received grants of several manors forfeited by the Earl of Wiltshire and others. He was joined in a commission with Lords Fauconberg and Clinton to keep the seas; and they made a descent on Brittany, and took Croquet and the Isle of Rhé. Towards the end of the year he served under Norfolk against the Lancastrians in the north, and was sent by the duke from Newcastle to help the Earl of Warwick at Warkworth, and in the spring of 1464 was with Norfolk in Wales when the duke was securing the country for the king.

Howard returned home on 8 June (1464), and bought the reversion of the constablership of Bamborough Castle. On 3 Nov. 1465 his wife Catharine (dau of Wm., Lord Moleyns,) died. He married his 2nd wife, Margaret, dau of Sir John Chedworth, and in Apr was elected knight of the shire for Suffolk. He was employed in June 1468 in attending the king's sis Eliz to Flanders on her marriage with Charles, duke of Burgundy.

When Henry VI was restored he created Howard a baron by a writ of summons dated 15 Oct. 1470, making him Baron de Howard. Nevertheless, he appears to have remained faithful to the Yorkist cause. He commanded a fleet sent to oppose the Lancastrians & on Edward's landing in Mar, 1471 proclaimed him king in Suffolk. Was at the battles of Barnet & Tewkesbury. In June he was appointed deputy-governor of Calais, and after having sworn to maintain the succession of the Prince of Wales, crossed over on 3 June, and was engaged in negotiations with France. When Edward invaded France in July 1475 he was accompanied by Howard, who was one of the king's most trusted councillors during the expedition; he was one of the commissioners who made the truce at Amiens, received a pension from Louis XI, and met Philip de Commines to arrange the conference between the two kings at Picquigny. He remained in France as a hostage for a short time after Edward left, and on his return to England received from the king as a reward for his fidelity and prudence grants of several manors in Suffolk and Cambridgeshire. He also was sent to Scotland in command of a fleet. At the funeral of Edward in April 1483, Howard, who is styled the king's bannerer, bore the late king's banner. Next he attached himself to Richard of Gloucester, and became privy to all his plans and doings. He was appointed high steward of the duchy of Lancaster on 13 May, and a privy councillor, and on 28 June was created Duke of Norfolk and earl marshal with remainder to the heirs male of his body, the patent thus reviving the dignities held by the Mowbrays and Thomas of Brotherton, son of Edward I, from whom he was descended on the mother's side through females. He was concerned in persuading the widowed queen [Elizabeth Woodville] to deliver up her younger son the Duke of York, that he might be lodged with his brother in the Tower. At the coronation of Richard III on 6 July he acted as high steward, bore the crown, and as marshal rode into Westminster Hall after the ceremony. He was appointed admiral of England, Ireland, and Aquitaine.

Was with Richard on his visit to the north on 12 Sept. 1484 when he was nominated chief of the commissioners to treat with the ambassadors of James III of Scotland.

For the sake of his oath and his honour he would not desert the king. At Bosworth he commanded the vanguard, which was largely composed of archers, and he was slain in the battle on 22 Aug. He was buried in the conventual church of Thetford. He was attainted by act of the first parliament of Henry VII. By his first wife, Catharine, he had Thomas, earl of Surrey and second duke of Norfolk, and four daughters: Anne, married to Sir Edward Gorges of Wrexham, Somerset; Isabel, married to Sir Robert Mortimer of Essex; Jane, married to John Timperley; and Margaret, married to Sir John Wyndham of Crownthorpe and Felbrigg, Norfolk, ancestor of the Wyndhams, earls of Egremont. His second wife, who bore him one daughter, Catharine, married to John Bouchier, second lord Berners, survived him, married John Norreys, and died in 1494.

Notes for Chamberlain:

Description This surname was an official name 'one in charge of a chamber'. He who had charge of his lord's receipts and issues, a treasurer. Early records of the name mention Walter de Chamberlayne, 1273, County Cambridge. Johannes Chaumburlayne, was listed in the Yorkshire Poll Tax of 1379. It was the name of a family of British politicians: Joseph (1836-1914) Liberal, advocate of tariff reform and colonial development: Sir Joseph Austen (1863-1937), his son, Liberal-Unionist and Conservative, foreign secretary 1924-9. Arthur Neville (1869-1940) half-brother of Austen, Conservative Prime Minister 1937-40. At first the coat of arms was a practical matter which served a function on the battlefield and in tournaments. With his helmet covering his face, and armour encasing the knight from head to foot, the only means of identification for his followers, was the insignia painted on his shield and embroidered on his surcoat, the flowing and draped garment worn over the armour. Since the dawn of civilisation the need to communicate has been a prime drive of all higher mankind. The more organised the social structure became, the more urgent the need to name places, objects and situations essential to the survival and existence of the social unit. From this common stem arose the requirements to identify families, tribes and individual members evolving into a pattern in evidence today. In the formation of this history, common usage of customs, trades, locations, patronymic and generic terms were often adopted as surnames. The demands of bureaucracy formally introduced by feudal lords in the 11th century, to define the boundaries and families within their fiefdoms, crystallized the need for personal identification and accountability, and surnames became in general use from this time onwards. The associated arms are recorded in Sir Bernard Burkes General Armory. Ulster King of Arms in 1884. This name, although originally the name of an official in charge of the private chambers of his master, later became a title of high rank

Notes for Alfred Knyvett:

This long-established surname is of Anglo-Norman origin, and derives from "cnivet", the Norman pronunciation of the Olde English pre 7th Century "cniht", owing to the French difficulty with the "h" of "cniht". The word originally meant "boy, youth, serving lad", later extended to mean "knight, a feudal tenant bound to serve his lord as a mounted soldier". Hence, it came to denote a man of some substance, since maintaining horses and armour was an expensive business. Knights in the last sense usually belonged to ancient noble families with distinguished family names of their own, so the surname is more likely to have been originally given as an occupational name to a servant in a knight's household, or as a nickname to someone who had played the part of a knight in a medieval pageant, or won the title in some contest of skill.
